Truckers set mass shutdown

NOW THAT'S MILEAGE: A technical high school student pilots his entry in a special economy marathon across the finish line in Enschede, Holland, claiming a world record of 2,500 kilometres per gallon of gas at a speed of 14 kph. A small, light-weight body and three bicycle wheels may not be the most comfortable way to get around but it could be the answer to the fuel crisis.

Times News Services

Independent U.S. truckers were poised for an unavoidable nationwide shutdown at midnight tonight in a protest against the oil industry, a trucking spokesman said today.

William Hill, chairman of the Independent Truckers Group, said on the NBC Today television show in Washington that it was too late to call off the shutdown set for 11:59 p.m., local time tonight, because there were too many truckers groups involved.

An Alabama trucker was shot and killed today as violence flared again in connection with the U.S.-wide fuel price and speed limit protest by independent drivers.

Alabama state troopers said Robert Tate of Birmingham was shot and killed while standing in a cotton field beside his disabled tractor-trailer rig which had jack-knifed off U.S. 72 near Tuscumbia. The officers said Tate bled to death after a shot fired by a medium-calibre rifle severed an artery in his left leg.

A state of emergency was declared Tuesday in Minnesota where the National Guard was mobilized to protect trucks and police escorts were ordered for convoys in Indiana and Florida as protesting truckers blockaded food and fuel terminals.

Meanwhile, crops rotted in the fields in parts of the South and some supermarkets started to run short of produce.

Gunfire ripped into trucks in Wisconsin, Utah, Virginia and Ohio. Nails scattered on major truck routes in central Florida punctured the tires of at least six sand trucks. Gunmen driving cars without licence plates prowled wooded areas of Mississippi, warning drivers to turn back.

Florida highway patrol spokesman Capt. J. E. Love said officials have organized a convoy of about 100 rigs to haul watermelons, tomatoes and other freight to the Northeast. The convoy was to leave Lake City, in northern Florida, today under the protection of state troopers.

Gov. Bob Graham's office contacted governor's offices in states along Interstates 75 and 95 seeking protection for the convoy when it crosses the Florida border, said spokeswoman Jill Chamberlain.

John Stiles, an agriculture official who set up the convoy, said: "For every three days we can't move our watermelons, 1,000 loads are going to rot in the fields. At an average $2,000 a load, that adds up."

In Minnesota, Gov. Al Quie declared a state of emergency and said he is ordering the National Guard, the state patrol and local officers to escort trucks whose drivers want to resume hauling. Arrangements are incomplete but it appears that about 200 national guardsmen would be called out initially.

Fuel rationing starts today in Massachusetts and Connecticut and in New York City and its suburbs. On

3 to 5 cent gas, oil hike

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will proceed with a $1-a-barrel increase July 1 for domestic oil.

The decision means consumers will face increases of between three and five cents a gallon for gasoline and home heating oil beginning Sept. 1 after existing crude oil stocks have been used.

Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn told reporters today after meeting Alberta energy minister Merv Leitch that talks on future oil price increases will be held in the coming months.

A second $1-a-barrel increase is scheduled Jan. 1, but neither Hnatyshyn nor Leitch would comment on possible change in that agreement.

Hnatyshyn said he did not expect current gasoline rationing problems in the U.S. to affect Canadian supplies.

In London, however, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister, has warned that the)orld faces an oil crisis of unprecedented magnitude by as early as 1988 if demand continues at the present rate.

Speaking Tuesday at a London conference on shipping and prospects for international trade, Yamani warned that when demand begins to outpace supply, "the pronounced shortfall which may emerge is likely to push market prices to levels three to four times the current one."

U.S. going neurotic over gas

By CLAUDE ADAMS
FP News Service

WASHINGTON — Last weekend, a suburban Washington woman with less than two gallons of gas left in the tank of her 1979 Volvo drove around for an hour in a fruitless search for a gas station that was open.

When her fuel finally ran out, she was left stranded miles from home and a passerby found her sobbing helplessly behind the wheel.

A 72-year-old woman in a giant white Cadillac spent the night sleeping in her car after parking it in a six-block-long gas queue. Nine hours later, she filled her tank with 22 gallons and let out a hoot of joy.

A TV cameraman shooting film on the lineups was run down by a motorist worried about losing his place in a queue.

After President Jimmy Carter's nationally-televised address to the nation on the SALT treaty Monday night, telephone callers to the White House spent more time deploring the gas crisis than in praising efforts to make the world safe from nuclear war. "Less salt and more gasoline," is how one White House spokesman described the tone of the calls.

The U.S. gasoline crisis is leaving a mark on the national psyche. It is literally driving people to the analyst's couch. The shortage, psychiatrists say, is triggering serious anxiety, self-doubt and fitful rage.

Patients are showing symptoms that range from extreme frustration (banging the steering wheel in gas queues that stretch to the horizon) to what the experts call "classic panic behavior."

"Most of what I hear are fantasies of what they'd like to do to a person who cut in a gas line," says Washington analyst Edward Kirby.

The prospect of a dry tank and reduced mobility is turning the U.S. into a nation of neurotics.

The car, he says, is both a "cocoon" that offers privacy and a vehicle that represents "freedom and speed and power."

But the angry American is not about to leave his car in the garage. Polls show that 75 per cent of Americans say they would like to cut down on gasoline consumption by sharing a ride to work, yet only 10 per cent join car pools.

One American out of 12 uses public transportation.

"People, when confronted with an energy crisis, do not want to change their behavior," says Ricardo Dobson, a researcher with the Chase Manhattan Bank. "They want to blame the crisis on somebody else."

U.S. drivers, who consume one of every nine barrels of oil produced in the world, refuse to believe there's a real shortage, and those who do are convinced it is a temporary aberration.

This view is expressed time and time again in man-on-the-street interviews.

Daniel Yergin, a researcher at the Harvard Business School, says his studies have shown that no amount of gas price increases will deter the motorist from filling his tank. "As long as he owns his particular car, he'll continue filling it," Yergin said in an interview.

Psychoanalyst Ed Kirby says nearly all his recent patients have expressed some kind of frustration, action or fantasy related to the energy crisis.

He says they talk about "helplessness, of being manipulated" by the Arabs or the oil companies or their national leaders or their fellow motorists who are conspiring to jump the gas lines.

Rip-off on car parts denied

Some Victoria-area automotive parts dealers today acknowledged they charge more than the manufacturers' list price but denied that they are cheating the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

They said their higher charges primarily reflect freight costs involved in bringing parts to Victoria.

The spokesmen were commenting on a letter sent to all dealers by ICBC president Robbie Sherrell, complaining about the "surcharge" practice.

Sherrell claims in the letter that a survey by the Crown-owned insurance corporation shows some dealers are charging as much as 45 per cent above list price, while the average across the province is about 15 per cent.

He asked each parts dealer to provide an assurance in writing by June 30 that it would charge no more than the manufacturers' list price.

Peter Pollen, of Peter Pollen Ford Ltd., said ICBC's complaint refers specifically to sheetmetal body parts supplied by dealer organizations.

While there is some justification for it, he said, the problem is more complex than concluding that a group of dealers is ripping off ICBC.

He said his firm charges 15 per cent above the manufacturer's list price in recognition of the cost of bringing fenders, body panels and other parts from the Vancouver depot.

Pollen said the bodyshop repair business is marginally profitable at best. If ICBC, which already stipulates labor rates on repairs, is going to arbitrarily fix parts prices "a lot of people are going to fold up."

Len Barkley, president of the Victoria automobile dealers' association, said overheads are higher for Victoria dealers and ICBC should recognize that.

"It's unrealistic to compare Victoria and Vancouver, which is what ICBC is doing," Barkley said. "We have to pay freight to get the parts here, but dealers on the mianland can just go to the depot and pick them up."

Frank Carson, owner of Suburban Motors Ltd., said he doubts that any Victoria firm charges as much for parts as the ICBC letter claims.

"I object to this blanket statement," he added. "The implication is that everyone is charging 45 percent more."

Dollar exchange

Petro B.C. profit $227M

The B.C. Petroleum Corp. made a profit of more than $227 million during the year ended March 31, 1979 — an increase of $12.1 million over the previous year.

Revenues totalled $433.7 million, up from the $413.6 million in 1978.

The Crown corporation's annual statement tabled in the legislature Tuesday shows the corporation retained $44.2 million and transferred $164.3 million to the provincial government.

The government had estimated it would collect $195 million from the corporation during the year and predicts it will get $170 million during the current fiscal year which began April 1.

Pot smugglers pouring it in

Drug enforcement officers believe that more than 900 tons of marijuana — worth more than $1.5 billion on the street — has been smuggled into B.C. and Washington State in the past 18 months.

That startling statistic was turned up by Times reporter Derek Sidenius in interviews with B.C. and Washington law enforcement and customs authorities as he investigated the extent of marijuana smuggling in the Pacific Northwest.

Sidenius spoke to officials in Seattle and this province and learned, among other things, that police and customs, although fighting hard against bulk trafficking in drugs, are finding it tough because the Pacific Northwest coast offers abundant areas where smugglers can unload their cargo with little fear of detection.

The official view is that despite recent major seizures in the Tofino area, only about one-tenth of all the smuggled marijuana is being intercepted.

Authorities compare the drug smuggling to the days of prohibition. But the stakes are higher and the people involved are prepared to spend big money to make big profits.

U.S. hijacking

CHICAGO (AP) — Two men claiming to have bombs hijacked an American Airlines jetliner carrying 137 persons to Chicago from New York today, the airline said. The men demanded that a jailed Serbian Orthodox priest be brought to the plane and flown with them to Peru.

Abacus realty put on block

Abacus Cities Ltd. will sell about $9 million worth of buildings in the Victoria area, a real estate spokesman said today.

Abacus is in receivership and the emergency sale was ordered to create a pool of funds to cover liabilities.

About $80 million worth of Canadian properties are being placed on the market.

The buildings with their asking prices include:

— Law Chambers in Bastion Square, $2.8 million.

— A professional building at Fort and Foul Bay, near Royal Jubilee Hospital, $2.8 million.

— The Belmont Building on Humboldt, $3.15 million.

— Land at Sidney for a proposed townhouse development, $1,105,000. The land involves 5.6 acres.

Not included in the sale, according to preliminary information, are two other developments owned by Abacus, the Market Square shopping centre and Gillain Manor, an alcoholism treatment centre.

First announcement of the sales came from Abacus, which is based in Alberta.

Abacus got into difficulties when an auditor warned its cash flow position was too low and a loan was subsequently called by a bank.

Higgin said further details of the sale offerings will be announced when they are known.

Somoza's 'elite' troops sent into Managua battle

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (UPI) — President Anastasio Somoza's elite troops fought Sandinista guerrillas in eastern Managua today trying to drive the rebels from their command post next to a school jammed with refugees.

Fighting was reported in a score of hamlets in the north and east of Nicaragua.

In the south, national guard T-33 jet aircraft dropped several 500-pound bombs on the Sandinistas' main defense line north of Sapoa, 5 kilometres north of the Costa Rican border.

Government planes also attacked guerrilla-held Leon today.

"It's going very well for us," said a high-ranking government source. "We expect to finish the operation in Managua today."

The sounds of rocket, machine-gun and mortar fire mixed with heavy explosions through the night. The government source said convoys of troop reinforcements, left the infantry training school in Managua at intervals through the night.

Smoke rose from the barrios on the east side of the city, which the guerrillas had controlled for more than a week.

The rebels of the Sandinista National Liberation Front appeared to have left or been driven out of the western half of the city but were fighting from barricaded positions on the other side of Managua.

The Sandinistas announced late Tuesday that their forces in the south had resumed their attack near La Virgen, south of Rivas. Buf Maj. Pablo Emilio Salazar, the commander of Somoza's forces in the south, denied the rebel claim in a television appearance.

"We have stopped them at the Rio Pita," said Salazar. "We figure there now are 400 to 600 guerrillas there. We are planning a major offensive."

Meanwhile in Havana today, Cuba accused the United States today of planning to intervene militarily in Nicaragua and called on Latin American countries to oppose such a move.

"The intervention of the United States in Nicaragua would create a Vietnam in the very heart of Latin America," a statement by the Cuban foreign ministry said.

"The people of Nicaragua and Central America would without doubt rise up against such foreign interference and their brothers in Latin America and the Caribbean could not be indifferent to this genocide," it added.

Kids 'lured' into cancer

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — Joseph Califano, U.S. health, education and welfare secretary, Tuesday accused the cigarette industry and its advertisers of knowingly luring children into cancer wards.

"Our surveys reveal, for example, that teen-agers choose the most widely-advertised cigarette brand at rates up to three times that of adult smokers, Califano told the fourth World Conference on Smoking and Health.

"To young people the invitation to 'be to where the flavor is' (a popular cigarette advertising slogan) is a ticket to the cancer ward."

Cigarette manufacturers claimed that their promotion campaigns are now aimed at children, Califano said, knowing well that the campaigns affected children deeply.

Baby eaten alive by rats

LEBANON, Tenn. (AP) — "She was nearly eaten alive," said the pediatrician who treated Valerie Hearn, a 10-month-old infant mauled by rats. "It was more than one rat, it appears. They'd had to be big rats, too."

Dr. Bernard Wiggins, who runs a children's clinic in Wilson County, said the attack that left Valerie in serious condition at a suburban Nashville hospital Tuesday was the worst he has ever seen.

"She had severe rat bites on multiple places of her body — both her hands, her lips, her ears, her nose, her legs and arms, her body, back and shoulders," he said. "Her right hand was nearly eaten through. Most of the fat pad in the central area of the hand was eaten out."

However, Wiggins said he believes the child will survive.

"Her bites look like they're infected and she's running a fever, but I think she'll come out of it," he said.

Wiggins said the child might soon have died of malnutrition if her mother had not rushed her to hospital after discovering the attack.

The child had suffered from a poor diet and lack of health care even before she was attacked, he said.

"It's not an intentional thing. It is just a pathetic thing. It looks like she suffers from palsy. And she's a classic case of a failure to thrive. She's 10 months old and weighs just 10 pounds. That compares with an average weight for her age of 15 to 18 pounds."

Wiggins said he had treated the girl once when she was a month old, but her mother never returned.

The mother called an ambulance early Tuesday after she heard the baby crying and "went right to it," said Wiggins. He said the mother "said she had just seen the baby minutes before it was attacked."

Officials say 19-year-old Carolyn Hearn and her three children lived in a dilapidated downtown neighborhood where Wiggins said he had treated a few rat bite victims earlier.

Confetti wasn't all thrown at this wedding

The groom threw cake at the bride. A relative threw dishes at guests. Guests threw chairs at cops. The cops threw guests in jail. The bizarre melee broke out at the Blue Dolphin Restaurant in San Leandro, Calif., during a wedding reception for 300 guests. Police said the festivities had just begun when the unidentified groom and his bride starting arguing. Loudly. Things escalated when the groom tossed the wedding cake at his bride. One of his relatives then tossed the dishes and the restaurant tossed in the towel, calling the cops. But the two policemen who arrived on the scene received less than an ecstatic greeting from the crowd, which turned on them, pushing and shoving. Police reinforcements fared little better, as guests began breaking chairs, smashing mirrors and wrestling with officers. When the 30-minute struggle ended, windows in five police cars were broken, three officers were injured and five guests were arrested on charges ranging from disturbing the peace to battery on a policemen. And the bride and groom who started it all? They were nowhere to be found, police said.

A brother and sister who met and married after growing up in separate adoptive families in Massachusetts say they are hopelessly in love and unable to part. "It's too late for Vicki and I to change our feelings," said David Goddu, 22, who met his natural sister for the first time a few months ago. "We set our minds to do it (separate). But when it comes down to it, we can't do it. How can we stop a relationship that's already started?" His sister, Victoria Pittorino, 23, said: "We had decided before we got married, we had discussed it, that we would not have children, that Dave would get a vasectomy." Goddu, who grew up as the son of James and Eileen Goddu of Holyoke, Mass., married Victoria, who was raised across the state in Arlington, three weeks ago. She had spent six years trying to find her natural parents and brother. The couple were arrested last week after Vicki's adoptive mother, Isabelle Pittorino, signed a complaint charging incest, and a court hearing was scheduled for July.

Wayne's will cuts one wife

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — John Wayne left an estate worth $6.85 million but none of it will be going to his third wife, Pilar, from whom the actor separated in 1973, a will filed Tuesday shows.

John Warren, Wayne's lawyer, filed the 27-page document in Orange County Superior Court. It claims the actor's estate includes $1 million in real property, $5.75 million in personal property and $100,000 in income from his holdings.

Warren noted that although Pilar Wayne is not included in the actor's will, she is provided for in a separation agreement.

Wayne left $10,000 to Mary St. John, who was his secretary for many years, and $30,000 to Pat Stacy, the actor's secretary at the time of his death.

The will provides for an orphan's bequeath to his two children under age 18, in the amount of $5,000 multiplied by the difference between 21 and the child's age at Wayne's death. This provision applies to John Ethan, 17, who will receive $20,000, and Marisa, 13, who will receive $40,000.

When each of his children reaches age 30 — John Ethan, Marisa and 23-year-old Aissa — he or she is to receive one-half the principal in his or her trust, then at age 35 the remainder. It is not known how much was in each trust.

Each of those four are bequeathed a trust sum. But Wayne insisted that the trustees continue to administer Toni's share, which will go to her children after she dies and they reach age 21.

All of Wayne's art objects — paintings, sculptures, and Indian artifacts — will go to organizations which can provide his estate with tax deductions.

The remainder of Wayne's estate will be placed into trust accounts, one of which is to provide his first wife, Josephine, with monthly cheques for $3,000. Upon her death, those funds will be divided by the four children he had by her.

Wayne's other major land holdings include his home on Newport Harbor and property on Puget Sound in Washington.

In addition to Pilar, there was one other person excluded from the will, Warren said. Donald La Cava, the husband of Wayne's eldest daughter, Toni, will not get anything from the estate, and cannot collect his wife's portion upon her death.

Too high a price

The horror stories that are unfolding at the commission looking into construction of facilities for the 1976 Montreal Olympics should be enough to discourage any Canadian city or province from ever bidding again to host the strange political-athletic-commercial extravaganza that the games have become.

Tales of overruns of millions of dollars, of unethical practices, of incompetence have practically become routine at the Montreal hearings. Canadians must also remember the serious problems of international relations and of security that plagued Canada, Quebec and Montreal during the run of the games and the millions of LotoCanada tickets sold to try to pay off the Olympics' huge deficits.

Reports from other cities planning to hold Olympics provide further evidence that the games are now a giant and expensive headache for the host jurisdiction. For example, the costs of construction of facilities at Lake Placid, New York, home of the 1980 Winter Olympics, are reported to be already millions of dollars over the budget.

However, it seems the message has not yet registered with Vancouver Mayor Jack Volrich nor with deputy premier Grace McCarthy. Both are still extremely eager for Vancouver to be awarded the 1988 Winter Olympics.

Mrs. McCarthy's theory is that the tourist and trade business that would follow the Olympics would more than compensate for the costs involved, estimated to be at least $70 million.

Volrich says both that he expects the games could break even and that the $70 million cost estimate could be extremely low because of the inflation factor.

At the same time, however, the mayor is leaving himself a wide escape hatch by making it clear from the beginning that any deficit should be the responsibility of the provincial or federal governments, not of Vancouver.

The chances of the games actually breaking even seem miniscule. Although some smaller sporting events such as the Canada Games and Commonwealth Games have, when carried out on a small scale, been financially successful, the history of the Olympics during the past few years has been that they lose tens of millions of dollars. There is no evidence to suggest that the winter Olympics in Vancouver would be any different.

The Games certainly would provide a stimulus to the tourist industry for the few weeks they would run. It would be, however, a brief, one-shot fling rather than a plan for long-term growth of the industry.

"... just imagine, at first we all thought he was for real ..."

Why continue the hunt?

This month, the government and people of Germany must deal with one of the most difficult issues faced by the federal republic since the Second World War. The anti-Nazi laws expire this year, and the bundestag (West German parliament) will decide whether to extend them to permit continued prosecution of war crimes.

When the modern German state was set up in 1949, there were good reasons for establishing a 30-year deadline on prosecutions for Nazi war crimes. It is difficult to produce reliable evidence after such a long time. Memories dim. Witnesses move away, grow old and die.

Probably few Germans and fewer people on the war's winning side thought that after two generations Nazis would still be actively pursued for their crimes.

Today many people question the purpose of continuing the hunt. Many unapprehended Nazis must have died in their beds in the years since the war. The day is not far off when there will be no one among the German population who had anything to do with the war. The majority of Germans alive today were born since 1945, or were only children during the Hitler years.

Have not the Germans done enough?

Apparently it is not for us to determine. Germans have lately expressed intense interested in the Hitler era. The U.S. television special Holocaust was watched by more Germans than any other television program in years.

"Why do we cast back our minds to all this today?" asked Chancellor Helmut Schmidt in a speech last November.

"We look back to learn. . . . We commemorate in order to learn how people ought to behave towards each other and how they ought not to behave. There can be no question of casting our people into the debtors' prison of history.

"But we have to bear the political legacy of those responsible. . . . Our young Germans should recall that it all started with the search for scapegoats. It continued with the use of force against writings, against books and against property. The use of force against human beings was then a natural consequence of these preparations.

"The abomination of all sweeping condemnations must be experienced if we wish to learn: that holds true whether they be directed against 'the Jews,' 'the Germans,' 'the Communists,' 'the Capitalists,' 'the System' or 'the Establishment.'

MARCEL PEPIN

Can Levesque be stopped?

QUEBEC—While listening to Premiere Rene Levesque's speech at the opening of his party's convention two weeks ago in Quebec City, my mind went back to 1969, just a few months after the Parti Quebecois was officially born.

That night, the independent MLA for Laurier was speaking at Pointe-Gatineau. About 400 people, most of them in their twenties, jammed in a smoky school gymnasium, gave him a standing ovation. He delivered a dynamic and exciting speech about how things would be better should French Quebecers decide to take care of their own future.

Levesque was then seen as a stubborn loner. His decision to quit the comfort of a well-established traditional party to run a small outfit gave him the credentials of courage and honesty. A lawyer from Ottawa present at the meeting told me later that he put a $20 bill in the basket. "All we need is a few guys like him in Quebec and Franco-Ontarians will make huge steps," he told me.

Premier's son joined

Three years later, I covered a similar meeting, that time in Saint-Jean, close to Montreal. The same enthusiastic crowd, the same dedicated young and articulate men and women were there, convinced that their party would one day make significant changes in Quebec politics. The key speaker that night was not Levesque, but a law student by the name of Pierre-Marc Johnson.

In a very matter of fact tone, Johnson explained to an attentive audience why he had decided to join Levesque's party. After examining an endless list of failed negotiations between Quebec and Ottawa, he said that he could not foresee any other solution than plain independence for Quebec, so that Quebecers could shape in their own manner the kind of society they want.

He, too, got a standing ovation.

When Premier Levesque told some 2,500 delegates and observers two weeks ago that his party was committed to complete, by winning the referendum, a historic page of Quebec, his supporters rose and applauded.

In a way, the premier delivered the same speech that so excited my lawyer friend from Ottawa many years ago, and that Mr. Johnson gave in 1973. But this time he was a little more cautious, because if he keeps promising heaven, he knows that one day or the other he will have to deliver the goods. So now, he also talks about patience, about the value of a careful step-by-step policy, about the need to explain the basic goals of the party to still hesitant voters.

But his main argument about getting rid of the present constitutional framework has not changed. It is based on an appeal to the pride of his fellow Quebecers.

This convention was supposed to clarify once and for all the option of the governing party. It did not. Nonetheless, the premier concluded, after two days of studious work, that this was done. And those articulate, educated and committed delegates rose and applauded. Why? Because once again, Levesque told them that they were able to change their destiny. The old line still works.

It works so well in fact that I do not see how this movement could be stopped. On the other hand, I really do not know where it will lead Quebec.

When a political party raises more than $2 million among close to a hundred thousand subscribers, when it enrolls 26,000 thousands new members in a single year and when it delegates do not even stop for lunch so they can complete their tight schedule, there is a driving force worth reckoning with.

But the most surprising thing about that convention is how careless are the delegates about the nuts and bolts of their option. Everything is based on faith. When the time comes to know how that beautiful program will be implemented, nobody asks the basic questions. What about reluctance of other provinces to start negotiations? What happens if the rest of Canada is not interested in giving the federal government the mandate to negotiate with Quebec? When and to whom will be presented the request for the patriation of all powers to the provincial government? Let us say that Quebecers say "yes" to any question related to the implementation of sovereignty-association, what is then the next step?

Those questions are dismissed by the party apparatus as a new form of intellectual terrorism. Twelve years ago they were not so relevant, because the party was looked at readily as a bargaining tool to speed up constitutional negotiations. But now, the PQ form the government. The referendum will be held within a few months. That platform is no more a dream but a very real fact. Nonetheless, even the delegates who have been asked to work hard to win the referendum left the convention without an answer about the ways and means of achieving the party goal.

If delegates do not feel the need to argue about the best ways to implement sovereignty-association, it is mainly because they have a better argument: pride. And they are moved by an invisible force that is called confidence. Up to now, their policy has produced good results. Not only do they form the government, but they have more than a fair chance of winning the referendum. The next step will be dealt with later. Those who grumble about this overdose of confidence are just bad believers. They want to dwarf the others, as the premier put it.

'Cool' won't play

How, then, can a political party apparently lacking of any traditional pragmatism expect to win re-election? Because there are two PQ parties. While half of the delegates were bery seriously debating the kind of Quebec they want to build under a separate roof, the other half were busy studying policies that can be implemented now, so that Quebecers will have a better society within the confederation framework in the months ahead.

Politics in Quebec, for the next many months will therefore be played on emotional grounds, whether we like it or not. The PQ plan is crystal clear: you are either a proud French-Canadian and vote "yes" or you are a coward and choose to vote against your own interests.

Who can beat such a rhetoric? Certainly not the dollars and cents approach of many federalist groups. A similar offensive on the part of federalist forces to show the attractiveness of Canada? That is risky. But what's left? I just do not know. There is only one thing for sure; cool and straight reasoning will not work. Emotion is the name of the game now.

RICHARD GWYN

It's a cooler place with Joe

OTTAWA — A couple of days before the new government was sworn in, a senior official in the privy council office spotted an unusual envelope in his incoming mail. The envelope carried the title: "Office of the Leader of the Opposition — Bureau de Chef de l'Opposition."

Inside was a note from Joe Clark thanking the official for having worked so hard to prepare him for the takeover.

The civil servant who told me this story went on to make the point: "During all of Trudeau's term none of us ever got a thank you note like that, while here was one from Clark before he'd even got into office."

Some of it's summer

Usually, the principal effect of a change of government is a change of political direction. British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's extraordinarily ambitious, back-to-basics budget is the best current example.

In Ottawa, though, the principal effect of the change of government has been to change the political climate in the capital. It has become a great deal more temperate.

Some of this is happenstance. Clark assumed power at the start of summer. As always, for the next couple of months, Canadians will be less concerned about the state of the nation than about the state of their lawns.

As well, because of their inexperience, Clark and his ministers are having to expend most of their energies in learning how to keep house, rather than on figuring out which New Jerusalem they'd like to build. Little policy-making thus is being done.

For example, Clark's cabinet used its meeting at Meach Lake last week to give itself a cram course in the functioning of ministerial offices rather than to attempt the "Whither Canada?" brainstorming sessions of Trudeau and his ministers. One tip, given to Clark's ministers by a senior official who briefed them, was to require all their personal staff to read the book Blind Ambition by John Dean of Watergate fame as a primer on what political aides should, and more particularly should not, do.

Of the 29 ministers, only Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens really has landed in his office, on his feet and running. Within his first week, Stevens has slapped a two-month hiring freeze on the civil service and has ordered all departments to propose specific spending cuts.

Clark, though, is the main cause of the change in the climate.

The thank you note to the official is typical of him. He isn't a zealot, and he is courteous. The transition has gone remarkably smoothly, because of Clark's determination to develop a "partnership" with the civil service. At the cost of annoying some of his backbench MPs and of Conservative supporters who had looked forward to seeing bureaucratic blood flowing in the streets, Clark has won, right off, the backing of the best and brightest in the civil service.

OTTAWA

More important, for the longer term, Clark's public image is blurred. Unlike Trudeau, Clark inspires neither love nor hate but instead more restricted emotions, ranging from wary disbelief to guarded hopefulness.

The point about blurred political targets is that they are hard to hit.

The difficulties Quebec Premier Rene Levesque now is in are one illustration of this. To win his referendum, Levesque needs an external enemy — as he once had in Trudeau — whom he can use to persuade Quebecers that they are threatened.

For lack of a scapegoat, Levesque seems disoriented. He's dithering about the date of the referendum. He hasn't been able to capitalize on the election's so-called "doomsday scenario" by which Quebec voted Liberal while the rest of the country voted Conservative. Sure the polarization exists, but with Clark as prime minister it just doesn't seem to be threatening.

Laid-back Ottawa

The federal Liberals are affected similarly. About the new government's gaffe, such as moving our embassy in Israel to Jerusalem, the Liberals have been conspicuous by their silence. Trudeau has gone out of his way to be co-operative, giving Clark tips on everything from next week's Tokyo summit meeting to the advantages of taping down the hot line phones at 24 Sussex so that two-year-old Catherine Clark can't use them to start World War Three. The Liberals aren't likely to poke their heads out of the weeds until the fall.

Actually, the principal difference in post-election Ottawa is the most obvious one of the lot. Trudeau is no longer prime minister. Although Clark scarcely is likely to admit it, he has already fulfilled the mandate, and indeed the only mandate, that Canadians have given him — to provide Canadians with a prime minister other than Trudeau.

That change alone lowered the political temperature about 20 degrees. Add to it Clark's equable temperament and it's easy to understand why, around Ottawa, things these days are laid-back cool.

Electoral reform

The article on electoral reform (Electoral Reform, Part I: A Proposal for Change; June 2) was excellent and you presented an interesting theory. Such a thesis, however, might prove to be unsatisfactory.

I cannot help wondering why you would advocate a partial proportional representation system. If it is so good why not use it exclusively? If the straight constituency representation system is defective, why not give it up entirely? My chief objection to your proposal is that it denies to party members any choice in 50 per cent of their candidates and instead, leaves the choice to the leaders of the parties.

That is hardly democratic for it guarantees that major party leaders can never be personally defeated by the voters, as occasionally one might deserve to be and it gives them still more power. Also, members elected by constituency haven't got much to look forward to in the way of promotion since cabinet appointments come only from the other group.

Another system, upon which your opinion is solicited, is the single transferable vote. Instead of marking one's ballot with an X, the choice is shown by tallying them in order of preference; 1, 2, 3 etc. Those receiving an over-all majority from the first choice votes are automatically elected. Where no majority is achieved, the second choice votes of the candidate with the poorest showing are then used. Should that still not produce the desired result, the next lowest are similarly made use of and so on until a majority is achieved. — F.L.P. Anderson, 409-2174 Cadboro Bay Road.

Misrepresented

I feel that my views regarding participation of young people in sporting activities were misrepresented in your article of June 12. The article was entitled M.D. Decries Youth Sports, and nothing could be further from the truth. The article was paraphased from a lecture I delivered to the Canadian Pysiotherapy Association sports medicine course, and the major thrust of that talk was that sporting activites only very infrequently result in serious damage to the growing structure of a child.

The incidence of injury in children and adolescence participating in sporting activities is considerably less than the incidence of older teenagers and adults. Moreover, the types of injuries sustained are minor and inconsequential regarding permanent growth abnormalities in the vast majority of cases. When these relatively minor injuries occur, proper physiotherapy and modifications of training pattern usually results in a cure.

I did indeed make the statements which you published on June 12. However, I feel these statements were taken out of context. I am a very strong advocate of participation of children and adults in sports, primarily for the purposes of fitness and social integration. There are certain sports which may be harmful and certain activities within certain sports which may be harmful and continued vigilance regarding rule changes and protective equipment needs to be exercised by the medical profession and laymen alike in order to prevent permanent injury to children.

One of the most positive preventive health trends of recent times is embodied in the current fitness craze, and I strongly endorse youth's involvement in recreational and sporting activities. I do not decry youth sports. The thrust of my talk to the Canadian Physiotherapy Association was a positive one with only a few negative statements, and I think it is unfortunate for the general public that you have chosen to publish only the negative side of the issue. I certainly hope it does not unnecessarily prevent children from participating in activities because of the concern of parents regarding permanent injury. — J. N. Penny, M.D., 100-1120 Yates Street.

Canada's hidden scandal

By TOM HARPUR
Toronto Star

The infants are dying at a rate of 26.1 deaths per 1,000 live births for native Indians, compared with a rate of 14.3 for the rest of the country.

In some parts of northern Ontario, Manitoba and Alberta, the infant mortality figure for reserves goes as high as four or five times the national average.

The respiratory and parasitic diseases taking this tragic toll are spawned in the same squalid conditions found in the Italian city of Naples, where the so-called "dark disease" has killed 80 babies, causing world-wide shock and outcry.

An Indian baby has a risk of death from respiratory diseases (pneumonia, broncholitis, etc.) 5.7 times greater than that of his non-Indian counterpart. His risk factor for death from infective, parasitic diseases (such as gastroenteritis) is also nearly six times higher (5.8).

Study after study has shown that the major cause of the tragedy is chronic poverty — inadequate housing and overcrowding, polluted drinking water, and crude or non-existent waste and garbage disposal methods.

More than 70 per cent of Indian homes have no running water and over 80 per cent have outdoor, pit toilets. Unemployment rates run as high as 90 per cent on some reserves.

Malnutrition plays a significant role as Indian mothers consume more and more junk foods. So, too, does the widespread switch from breast-feeding with its built-in immunities to the bottle-feeding of processed baby formulae.

Yet, Indian leaders say their attempts to tell their story and mobilize effective action are being "stone-walled" by government inertia and public indifference.

Inadequate housing and over-crowding lead to disease on Indian reserves

As Dr. John Coombs, a physician on the staff of the National Indian Brotherhood in Ottawa puts it: "We have the Third World or even the Fourth World in this country, hidden away on our Indian reserves, but nobody sees it or wants to hear about it."

Dr. Lyle Black, assistant deputy minister for the medical services branch of the federal Health and Welfare Department (the body directly responsible for Indian health care) said he finds the infant mortality rate a matter of "incredible frustration."

While he said he was encouraged by 1978 figures that showed a slight reduction to 26.1 deaths per 1,000, he wonders if Canada "is prepared to make this a number one priority."

Here's a typical case. Moses and Rebecca McKay live in a small Indian settlement on an isolated lake about 200 miles by air from the nearest doctor. They have no telephone, electricity, or running water.

Suddenly, a few weeks ago, their 3-month-old son, Samson, developed a fever. At first it seemed like a common cold; but within 48 hours the child could breathe only with the greatest difficulty.

Greatly alarmed, the couple bundled him up well and headed out by canoe to the nursing station at the main island of the reserve, about eight miles away. However, by the time they arrived, the infant was already dead.

The nurse in charge could only listen to their story, inform her medical superiors by long-distance telephone, and do what she could to comfort the distracted pair. The body was then given back for burial by the resident Anglican missionary on a hillside that already has more than its share of tiny, white-picketted graves.

Several Indian infants on reserves north of Edmonton in oil-rich Alberta have died this spring in a similar manner, provoking the Alberta Indian Association into a full-scale inquiry of its own.

Charlie Chisackay, a councillor of the Dene Tha' Band at High Level, Alberta, in the area of the outbreak, says that two babies died on his reserve this spring and that five or six have been in hospital with acute, bronchial-type infections.

He says his brother's baby is now said by doctors to have suffered brain damage as a result of fever and other complications attending an attack of acute bronchiolitis earlier in the spring.

"Several factors are to blame," Chisackay said.

"The majority of the people here use melted snow or water from the river to drink. There's supposed to be a water system but it hasn't worked for some time. All the toilets are outdoor pits and our camp is subject to regular, spring flooding."

He blamed poor housing as well, saying the federal government's subsidy grant of $12,000 a house was insufficient to put up a dwelling fitted for extreme, northern conditions.

Chisackay repeated a charge made by Indians across the country that the government has been cutting back on essential health services and said that one man on the reserve who has had a tooth abscess since March has been told a dentist will come in to see him in September.

Joe Dion, president of the Alberta Indian Association, said that considering the vast sums in the province's Heritage Fund, the situation on Indian reserves there is "scandalous."

Ontario, however, fares no better. At the Whitedog Reserve, about 70 miles by rough road north of Kenora, more than 20 babies have been in hospital since Jan. 1 with a variety of serious chest infections.

One had to be flown to Winnipeg to save its life. Three of the infants are still in a Kenora hospital.

The chief, Roy McDonald, believes most of the fatalities on reserves are due to poor housing. Interviewed in his simple office — he was sitting under a sign heralding the International Year of the Child — he pointed out the window at the box-like, frame houses of his band and said:

"For example, there's no porch on any of these homes. So, in extreme, sub-zero weather, the whole house is flooded by a blast of icy air every time you open the door.

"The babies suffer the most from this and a lot of pneumonia deaths stem directly from it. Every family has a kid in hospital some time or other on this account."

Dr. Coombs, who has spent several years working with the Sandy Lake Indians of the Sioux Lookout region commented:

"Is it any wonder? These people have the poorest housing, the poorest sewage disposal, the greatest poverty and overcrowding of any minority in Canada today."

He charged the federal government with attempting to cut back on Indian health services and said it was "bloody hypocritical" for officials to deny it.

"Indian health today is a national scandal and the politicians are trying to sweep it under the carpet," he said. "The barriers to improved Indian health are at least as much economic and political as they are medical."

Swedes say no to Travolta, Donald Duck

By CHRIS MOSEY

STOCKHOLM — Pornography is part of the Scandinavian way of life, but John Travolta and even Donald Duck are "morally unsuitable", according to the spokesmen for a new wave of puritanism sweeping Sweden.

The movement claimed its first victim when the controversial American film The Warriors was banned by the State Cinema Bureau. The movie, alleged to have been the cause of two motiveless murders in the United States, was deemed too violent for Sweden.

Anyone over 18 can see such hard-porn epics as Luxury Brothels, Larry's Juicy Sex Dreams and Sex Holiday in Majorca, but cannot watch The Warriors fight their way back across New York from a street gang convention.

Swedes argue persuasively that statistics show that rape cases have fallen with increased permissiveness on celluloid while real violence has increased step by step with its increase on the screen.

They are also worried about the increasing Americanization of their society by films like Saturday Night Fever and Grease. Social Democratic MP Ake Gustafsson sees John Travolta as a definite threat to the Swedish way of life.

"His films are a symbol for a commercialism which mercilessly exploits youth and at the same time campaigns for a lifestyle which I in no way can sympathize with," he says.

Gustafsson wants the state to invest more money in Swedish youth clubs and sports organizations to combat Travolta, and as chairman of the State Youth Council, he has considerable influence.

It was Helena Sandblad, new chief of children's television on Sweden's second channel, who decided that Donald Duck — or Kalle Anka, as he is called here — was unsuitable. "Soon there won't be any real Swedish culture left," she said.

Then there is the more familiar lobby against toy guns, led by social worker Ulla Tillander.

But it was left to environmentalist Ludvig Rasmussen to come up with the most unusual moral threat: ice hockey. He wants a total ban on the nation's No. 1 winter sport.

"Hockey is just becoming more and more of a violent burlesque show," he argues. "It represents the darker side of the American way of life, violent, chauvinistic and grossly commercial," although he admits that Swedish ice hockey "isn't as racist as its American equivalent."

There is a long tradition of puritanism in Sweden, evidence of which can be found in the country's restrictive liquor laws.

Abolitionists recently succeeded in outlawing medium strength beer, which they blamed for rising drunkenness among teenagers.

A new dawn down the Tube?

By JAMES CAMERON
Manchester Guardian

A day or two ago I was talking to a rather rich man, which was an invigorating experience for one who usually mixes with his equals. This gentleman was not only most civil and courteous but also ostentatiously modest, if you know what I mean, and he lives in Britain not because he has to, like most of us; he came here from choice and remains with enthusiasm.

I asked him quite simply why he chose to dwell in a land which, from all I read in the papers, is not only on the brink of ruin but has a lousy climate and raging inflation and mounting unemployment and punitive taxation and all the conditions that clearly lead to imminent catastrophe.

He rebuked me for believing in idle gossip. Britain, he told me, is a wonderful place, full of people as rich as he is, or even more so. I should mention that much of his prosperity is derived from entertaining these people with extremely expensive food and drink, which they like. Apparently there is no lack of customers — and they are by no means all Arabs — who are happy to pay a hundred nicker a time for a snack and a bottle in exotic surroundings and surrounded by like-minded lovelies.

This greatly surprised me, because I now live a sheltered life and was under the impression that all rich people were taxed into penury and dined in Wimpy bars. This is apparently not so. There are places, one of which belongs to my friend, that frequently have to turn away customers clamoring to be relieved of their dough for the transient pleasures that come out of a gramophone and a glass, and when I say dough I mean it.

When I saw the bill that someone else was signing I winced so visibly that my friend asked if I was feeling all right. I was not.

I find this phenomenon hard to reconcile with the philosophy of Sir Geoffrey Howe, the Chancellor of the Exchequer who is about to set these wastrels an example by cutting public expenditure on such vanities as national health and housing and of course unemployment and sickness benefits.

My own case is trivial but not irrelevant. Not long ago I became eligible, as I thought, for the pension which a beneficent state offers all who have kept up their stamps. Instead, I got a form asking me if I intended to continue doing any work, and if so how many hours a week. I replied, naturally: as many as I damn well could. To which came the jovial answer: in that case, mate, you can whistle for your pension for another five years.

I am obliged to conclude, in spite of all the exhortations, that productivity is actively to be discouraged. Perhaps if I had been making engine-bolts for DC-10s it would have been different.

If it is not too late I have a suggestion to offer Chancellor Howe, and that is that there is a good case to be made for putting up the fares on London's Underground railway, occasioned by the soaring cost of chalk.

When I went into my modest station a couple of days ago I thought momentarily that I was in a graphics exhibition. One chalked sign said: "NO phones working." Another said: "Lift out of order." Yet another said: "Ticket machines not in service." Finally another said: "There are NO lavatories." At that point they must have run out of chalk, because it was left to the out-of-service lift man to tell the customers that there were in any case no trains running from the station because of some unspecified defect on the line. "Make your way to the next station," he said, "they might just be okay there."

Since a station that has no lifts, no tickets, no phones, no lavatories, and especially no trains does not quite fulfil my exacting standards for a station, I went home. I was only going to do a job, after all, and that must have seemed to all around a quixotic thing to do. My behavior would doubtless have met with the hearty approval of the Department of Health and Social Security, but it was not much help to me. I wonder if Sir Geoffrey Howe has ever travelled by Tube?

One month after the New Dawn, or six weeks into the Thatcher Millennium, as you choose to see it, things seem to have moved but hesitantly into the promised glories. I view with alarm the prospect of having to pay two bob to post a letter, and God knows how much for luxuries like a pint of milk and a loaf of bread. I was not consoled by the privilege of being able to vote for a European MP, among candidates whose names I did not even know, since nobody told me.

Let us hasten off to the disco, where at least you can still get a gin and tonic for under a fiver.

Brascan chief quitting

TORONTO (CP) — Less than a week after Edper Equities Ltd. successfully concluded its takeover of Brascan Ltd., Brascan chairman and chief executive officer J. H. (Jake) Moore has indicated he will resign voluntarily.

Moore, 63, will likely leave the company immediately after the annual meeting, said an information circular to announce the meeting.

At that meeting, Edper proposes to nominate 10 of the company's 19 directors.

The circular said Edper "had indicated that its representatives on the board will support the continuation of the present officers of the company."

But it does not say who will be appointed new chief executive officer.

Last Thursday, Edper ended the bitter struggle for control of Brascan by raising its ownership of the company to more than 50 per cent.

The takeover fight included three separate offers for Brascan shares by Edper, court battles in New York and an unsuccessful bid by Brascan to buy out the U.S. retail giant, F. W. Woolworth and Co., for $1.1 billion.

The circular said Edper intends to nominate Peter F. Bronfman to replace Moore, Jamie Ortiz-Patino as vice-chairman, J. Trevor Eyton as chairman of the executive committee and Jack Cockwell as vice-president.

Bronfman is president of Edper Investments Ltd., parent of Edper Equities, while Ortiz-Patino is deputy chairman of Patino N.V., the Netherlands-based mining company with a third interest in Edper Equities.

After serving as chairman of John Labatt Ltd., Moore came to Brascan 10 years ago. He steered the company through a busy diversification period and was criticized by some shareholders for selling Brascan's power utility in Brazil last fall for $380 million.

The big influx of cash made Brascan an attractive takeover prospect and Edper Equities was formed specifically to get control of the conglomerate.

Poor crops making speculators bullish

WINNIPEG (CP) — Commodity speculators are starting to cash in on bad crop years in the Soviet Union and Europe and uncertainty about the effects of late planting in Canada this spring, says the president of the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

"We're starting to enter a bullish phase of the market," says Doug Ford, who has supervised daily trading on Canada's only commodity futures exchange for two years.

He says the action has been fast and furious in the last two weeks, following a pattern set on the giant Chicago Board of Trade.

"It's been seen (there) in beans and corn and we're seeing it in rapeseed and flax."

Several times in recent weeks, oilseeds have risen to the daily trading limit of $10 a tonne, and Ford says feed wheat and barley prices will also shoot up in the scramble.

He says the world supply of barley will be especially tight, with total Canadian acreage down by nearly 20 per cent from last year to less than nine million acres.

Even before the upward pressure on some futures prices became noticeable recently, Ford was overseeing a record year on the Winnipeg exchange.

In May, trading volumes in oilseeds, domestic feed grains, rye, gold and gold options broke the 200,000-contract mark, and the number of contracts traded this month is already in excess of 230,000.

With a month to go in the current fiscal year, more than two million contracts have been traded, compared to 1.34 million for all of 1977-1978.

Ford says that among long-term factors contributing to the steady increase in trading was the 1974 change in federal domestic feed-grain policy which boosted sales on the open market. Another is the maturing of the rapeseed market, which "has just come into its own" 16 years after rapeseed was first listed on the exchange.

A less recognizable but significant influence on trading volumes is the decision by more and more North Americans to make speculative investments in commodities.

"There is a general trend in the United States, the heart of free enterprise, to more use of the futures market."

Ford has his staff working hard to develop trading in what he calls "the ultimate commodity" — money — through interest rate futures.

The proposed addition to the exchange's offerings will complement the gold futures and options, he says. "It's going to be a whole new area for investors and commercial money users."

EDC backs $5.6M locomotive deal

OTTAWA (CP) — A $5.6-million, two-part financing arrangement has been concluded with Yugoslavia to support a $6.7-million sale in locomotives and heavy equipment to the southeastern European state, the Export Development Corp. announced Tuesday.

A corporation statement said that under the terms of one loan of $4.1 million, Zeleznicka Transportna Organizacija Pritina in Kosovo province will purchase $4.8 million in locomotives, spare parts and tools manufactured by General Motors of Canada Ltd.

A second loan of $1.5 million in United States currency will support a U.S. $1.9-million sale of 170-ton rear-dump haulers and spare parts to Rudarsko Topioicarski Basen, a mining and chemical combine in the city of Bor, the statement said.

The heavy equipment is also produced by General Motors.

The corporation is a federal agency that provides loans to support export sales, export credits, insurance and foreign investment.

Neilson joins Bowman for dual-coaching plan

BUFFALO (AP) — Scotty Bowman, new general manager of Buffalo Sabres, today introduced the dual-coaching concept to the National Hockey League and announced the appointment of Roger Neilson as his associate coach.

Neilson, 45, coached Toronto Maples Leafs the last two years.

Bowman refused to comment on the status of assistant general manager John Andersen, who began the 1978-79 season as director of scouting and became acting general manager in December.

Andersen said Tuesday he had learned through the press of today's news conference, and Bowman's unilateral work bringing in Neilson put him in a mood "to go in and clean out my desk."

Bowman said at the news conference both he and Neilson would coach the team this season, but that Neilson would be the head coach in 1980-81.

Bowman, who only last week joined the Sabres after quitting as coach of the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens, said he was pleased to be working with Neilson again.

"We go back to the 1960s when I was coaching in the junior ranks for Montreal and Roger was a scout."

Neilson, a successful coach with Peterborough in the Ontario Major Junior Hockey League before joining the Leafs organization, had a 75-62-23 record with the Leafs in two seasons and the club's playoff record in those two years was eight wins and 11 losses.

His move to Buffalo ended several weeks of speculation about whether he would stay in Toronto where Leafs owner Harold Ballard fired and rehired Neilson in a bizarre two-day episode last March.

Terms of his agreement with Bowman were not announced but it was reported he will receive $70,000 a season, about $30,000 more than he got with Toronto.

"This is a concept which has been successful in other areas, and we expect it to be successful here," Bowman said of the two-coach system. "We've both had experience behind the bench."

Bowman, 45, coached Montreal to four straight Stanley Cup titles before he was hired by the Sabres. He left Montreal because the job of general manager was not open to him there. He said he had wanted to try a split-coaching concept for several years.

"You will see it in the way European hockey teams are organized."

He envisions a football-style organization, with an observer positioned elsewhere in the rink to observe opposition weaknesses and strategies and communicating with the bench through headphones.

Budget pitchers blank 'Abe Ruth'

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

The "Abe Ruth" of men's softball is a 42-year-old native of New York, talks like it and doesn't think he is a showoff but confesses he "always gets psyched up" when he plays.

But given the chance tonight, Abe Baker "might just point to the fence" when the Interstate Batterymen of Worcester, Mass., resume their "Super Series" with Victoria Budgets at Royal Athletic Park.

The third baseman with the Batterymen, the colorful Baker is credited with clouting more than 500 home runs since he signed his first American Softball Association registration form 30 years ago.

He didn't improve on the record Tuesday when Victoria pitchers Andy Konopacki and Mark Smith hung the collar on Baker as Budgets swept the doubleheader 1-0 and 5-0.

"A man my age," said Baker, "should never be out before July first. And while I don't want you to think I'm using it as an alibi, I'm playing with a pulled muscle and this kind of weather doesn't help.

"But I'll tell you, that Smith is some pitcher. In all my years, I can't remember striking out three times in one game, and some of those games have stretched to 24 innings. Smith got me the first two times and I told the boys in the dugout that if he did it to me again, I would buy him a steak."

Konopacki got to Baker for three of the outs, including one strikeout, but Abe figures he can hit the Victoria veteran.

Baker, who once pointed to centre field and then connected for a home run off the great Ty Stofflet, thought about it and then admitted he wouldn't be above "pointing" if he were to face Konopacki again.

As Mr. Harvey Stevenson, the Budgets' field boss, would have it, the Packer and Rod Guenter draw the starting assignments tonight. Guenter, who once played for the Batterymen, is one of the players picked up by Budgets for their trip to the Pan-American Games.

The long journey starts Friday when the team departs for exhibition series in Santa Rosa and Florida before moving on to the Games in Puerto Rico. Tonight is bon voyage time for the Canadian champions.

Budgets continue to look sharp. Particularly the pitching that has dominated recent action at Royal Athletic Park.

Konopacki and Smith both recorded one-hit shutouts as they allowed the seasoned Batterymen only three runners in 14 innings.

Konpacki faced the minimum 21 batters in the opener, but it wasn't perfection.

Outfielder Eric Isadore spoiled the no-hitter with a leadoff single in the fifth but was cut down by a following double play.

Kevin Depasse, another outfielder, was the spoiler for Smith. He walked in the first and singled in the fourth to account for Worcester's only other base-runners.

Singles by Bob Walton, Dennis Eckert and Bob Holness scored the winning run in the first game. Walton's two-run homer and successive solo blasts by Randy Benn and rookie Warren Campbell provided Smith with more support than necessary.

Mussels enjoy a sweeter start

BELLINGHAM — Things were a little different the second time around.

Victoria Mussels, who had their baseball debut in the Northwest League spoiled last season in Victoria, exacted a little revenge by opening their second season with a 9-8 victory over Bellingham in a game which lasted a little over four hours here Tuesday.

Mussels collected the victory by erupting for four runs in the seventh inning and holding off a ninth-inning surge by the home club.

Shortstop Steve Young, ninth in the Victoria batting order, proved to be the sparkplug by driving in four runs, including two on a single in the seventh to give Mussels an 8-5 edge.

Bellingham, which had built a 5-3 lead with four runs in the fifth inning of the game, scored three runs in the ninth before Steve Harterey, the third Victoria pitcher, notched the last out.

The two squads meet again here tonight.

In other season-openers Tuesday, Eugene won 7-6 in 10 innings at home against Salem, Bend romped to a 15-5 victory at Medford and Walla Walla pleased hometown fans by whipping Grays Harbor 9-2.

Lions tumble Ticats for second win in row

VANCOUVER (CP) — Ken Hinton returned a punt 48 yards to set up a short touchdown run by Robert Johnson in the third quarter Tuesday night to give British Columbia Lions a 16-11 decision over Hamilton Tiger-Cats in a Canadian Football League exhibition game.

In the only other game, Edmonton quarterbacks Bruce Lemmerman, Tom Wilkinson and Charlie Weatherbie combined to complete 21 of 32 passes for 360 yards and three touchdowns as the Eskimos whipped the Toronto Argonauts, 31-16.

Hinton's return was stopped at the Hamilton two yard line by punter Dave Marler and one play later Johnson swept into the end zone to give the Lions their second straight win of the exhibition season.

Marler accounted for the rest of the Hamilton scoring with a convert, a 38-yard field goal and a single on a missed field goal. It was Hamilton's second loss in exhibition play.

B.C.'s other touchdown came in the second quarter when rookie defensive back Tyron Gray picked off a Smith pass at the Hamilton 40 and returned it for a touchdown. Lui Passaglia converted one of the B.C. majors and also kicked a 20-yard field goal.

The crowd of 17,839 at Empire Stadium saw both teams try to move the ball with their passing games, but most of the passes were short in nature as neither team mounted a consistent offence.

The Lions led 3-0 after the first quarter on Passaglia's field goal following B.C.'s first possession. Jerry Tagge quarterbacked the Lions during the opening half, but was inconsistent in his throws, completing nine of 16 pass attempts for 94 yards, with one interception.

Carlos Brown and Dennis Shaw shared the B.C. quarterback duties in the second half, but without positive results. Brown completed four of 12 attempts for 54 yards and Shaw hit on just one of four attempts for 12 yards. All three B.C. quarterbacks were intercepted once.

Head coach Vic Rapp of the Lions said after the game that he might not release a quarterback Friday when B.C. must reduce its roster to 45 players. Joe Paopao did not play against the Tiger-Cats.

Incentive for athletes at Pan-Am track trials

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canadian runners who have not clocked world-class times so far this year will face stiff challenges this weekend at the Pan-American Games track trials at Empire Stadium.

The reason is that the Canadian Olympic Association has already submitted the list of Canadian athletes for the Games to Pan-Am organizers at San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Dr. Stu Maddin of Vancouver, COA vice-president and chef de mission for Canada to the Games, says that spectacular times will be needed here Friday and Saturday for the COA to attempt to change the Canadian entries.

Canada has filed its list of 527 athletes with Puerto Rico officials, including 28 track athletes for the 14 track events.

"If Canadian runners come forth with spectacular times this weekend, the COA then will exert every possible pressure on Games officials to make changes in the Canadian team," Maddin said. "But it will take outstanding times.

"The incentive is still there, however, for our runners who are not on the list to come forth with times of world-class calibre."

Countries participating in the Pan-Am Games filed their entries at midnight Tuesday night, despite the fact that many Games trials have not yet been held in Canada.

The Canadian Track and Field Association made its recommendations recently to the COA and will have technical director Gerard Mach of Ottawa present at the track trials here.

Archery trial set

Wanda Allan and Vesa Myllyniemi of Victoria are among the favorites to gain places during trials Saturday and Sunday for spots on the British Columbia archery teams for the Western Canada Games and the Canadian outdoor championships.

The trials are scheduled from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day at Royal Oak School on West Saanich Road.

Allan was a member of the Canadian team in the 1976 Olympic Games and Myllyniem captured a bronze medal in the 1976 Canada Summer Games.

Nine-run inning

Farmer Construction batters rampaged to score all their runs in the fourth inning Tuesday while tripping Capital Radiators 9-1 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game at Lambrick Park.

Capitals enjoyed a brief lead on a home run by Randy Price in the second frame, but the league leaders managed to turn seven hits, two bases-on-balls and an error into a batch of runs.

Don Towner slammed a two-run single and Al Moir drilled a two-run double to lead the attack.

Cap. Radiators	010 000 0—	1 6 1

Esquimalt Legion got back on the right track Tuesday, tripping Coquitlam Adanacs 11-6 in a Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League game at Esquimalt Sports Centre.

Victory ended a four-game losing streak for Esquimalt, which hadn't collected a victory since posting an upset over Burnaby Cablevision two weeks ago.

Reelie did come up with two goals and managed to dominate faceoffs while turning in a good effort on defence, but failed to get enough support from his clubmates.

He was shut out in assists — his specialty — but still leads the league with 78 points (including 51 assists), four more than the point total owned by Rob Dalzell of New Westminster Salmonbellies.

After Reelie opened scoring for Adanacs at 13:29 of the first period, Duch held the visiting club at bay until 16:03 of the second session.

Too Tall abandons football to tackle career in boxing

NEW YORK (AP) — Defensive end Ed (Too Tall) Jones of the National Football League's Dallas Cowboys has retired and says he plans to pursue a second sports career as a heavyweight boxer.

The 6-foot-9, 270-pound Jones, Dallas' No. 1 choice from Tennessee State five years ago, played out his option with the Cowboys last season and they were unable to reach contract terms.

"It is my intention to become the heavyweight champion of the world," Jones said in a statement. He stressed that his decision to retire was final and not a ploy to get more money from the Cowboys.

Rocks call up recruits for clash with leaders

Bill Munroe, coach of Victoria Shamrocks, will have to dig a little deeper for backup support tonight in a game against league-leading New Westminster Salmonbellies at Memorial Arena.

In the Western Lacrosse Association game that starts at 8, Munroe is expected to make use of four recruits after receiving news of the latest addition to the roster of the disabled.

Gerry Cadwallader had his appendix removed earlier this week and is expected to be out of action for about six weeks.

Cadwallader joins veterans Joe McCrae and Larry Bell on the injury list. McCrae is suffering from torn knee ligaments and Bell is nursing a broken left index finger. Both are expected to be sidelined for about three to six weeks.

Kevin Kennedy, a hard-shooting Victoria product obtained in a trade for Jim Gow with Nanaimo Timbermen earlier this week, is expected to start tonight along with senior "B" stars Andy Reid and Bill Marechek. Juniors Rhys Wickes and Jim Boyd may also be pressed into service.

"Besides the injuries, we have lost three players (Ivan Thompson, Charn Dhillon and Jerry Kustaski) since the start of the season," said general-manager Leon Hall.

Elsewhere, league commissioner Wally Donaldson has announced a two-game suspension for Pete Rushton of Timbermen, who was involved in an "altercation with a referee" during a game in Nanaimo last Saturday. The suspension will put Rushton on the sidelines for games Thursday and Saturday this week.

In league play Tuesday, Doug Hayes scored six goals, including four in a row in the second period, to lead Vancouver Burrards to a 14-13 win over Coquitlam Adanacs.

Dan Perreault and Brian Moody each scored twice for the Burrards, who led 5-3 after one period and 13-9 after 40 minutes.

Tim Kelly and Dave Durante paced the Adanacs with three goals apiece. Dan Wilson (2), Ray Durante, Ray Mattison, Gord Quilty, Frank Nielson and Mark Tuura were the other Coquitlam marksmen.

OUTDOORS
Stewart Lang

And when book editor Peter Murray came by with a new release I knew for sure I should have stayed in bed that morning.

I've been toying with the idea of taking up rockhounding — after all, I am in the outdoors a good portion of the time and knowing something about the rocks and minerals beneath my feet might add an extra dimension to the experience.

And, who knows? I might pick up something valuable.

So with this thought in mind I searched high and low through most of the bookstores in Victoria and Duncan for a basic guide to rocks and minderals — preferably with color plates for identification purposes. Finally, I located one and coughed up a fair bit of cash for the tome.

Then Peter comes up with a free review copy of a book — infinitely better than the one I bought.

The Audubon Society Field Guide to North American Rocks and Minerals, written by Charles W. Chesterman and published by Random House of Canada, is impressive even on first glance.

It costs $12.50 and contains 794 color plates of minerals, gemstones and rocks arranged according to color and form, providing the first step in identifying your find.

In addition, there's an excellent section — lacking in the other book — that explains concisely all the other methods of keying in a specific mineral through hardness, specific gravity, streak, lustre, cleavage, crystal form and mineral habit and form.

Just after the color plates, the book has a descriptive key to all the North American minerals arranged according to color and in ascending scales of hardness. It also outlines the distinctive features and gives a guide to cleavage of each mineral.

Another section covers rocks in the same top-notch manner with both visual and descriptive keys.

Tools and techniques for mineral collecting are thoroughly covered and there's even a handy listing of the geological environment of minerals.

Rockhounds on Vancouver Island are fortunate in many ways. Anyone interested in doing lapidary work can find semi-precious minerals such as jasper, agate and rhodonite by doing a little research and legwork — remembering always that some areas have been staked with claims and aren't open to collectors.

Beaches on both coasts of the Island also provide some interesting treasures.

Further information on rockhounding may be obtained at the Rockhound Shop, which appears to have a clear monopoly on the market around this end of the Island.

Hoop coach one speaker as hockey coaches meet

While games may be different, the task of motivating players is a common denominator in all sports.

That's why Jack Donohue, coach of Canada's national basketball team, will be among the highlight speakers when the B.C. Amateur Hockey Association holds a Level IV coaching conference here July 25-29 as part of the National Coaches Certification Program.

Donohue, who will speak on the psychology of coaching, is also known to be one of the most entertaining and dynamic speakers associated with sports in North America.

"Jack Donohue spoke at a CAHA conference last year and was very well received," said conference coordinator Dave Andrews. "His coaching philosophy is applicable to many sports but he does have some special points to make about hockey."

Other speakers lined up for the conference are: Dave Dryden, goalkeeper with Edmonton Oilers of the National Hockey League; Danny Gare, captain of Buffalo Sabres of the NHL and his father, Ernie, a leading authority on physical conditioning; Clare Drake of Edmonton and co-coach of Canada's 1980 Winter Olympics team; Bobby Kromm, coach of Detroit Red Wings; Dave King, former coach of Billings Bighorns of the Western Hockey League and now coach at the University of Saskatchewan; Dr. George Kingston, an international hockey authority; Laura Stamm, a power-skating expert; Larry Lund, former World Hockey Association star and director of the highly-rated Okanagan Hockey School; and Dr. Bob Hindmarch, professor of physical education at the University of British Columbia and chairman of the CAHA development council.

The conference, expected to draw about 100 coaches from all parts of the province, will consist of workshop sessions at the University of Victoria and on-ice sessions at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

At least 87 of the attending coaches will have passed the first three levels of coaching certification and the remaining spots have been held open for junior "A", major junior and senior amateur coaches.

Fans wishing to take in the ice demonstrations may view the proceedings between 1 and 5 p.m. July 26 to 28.

"That must be one nervous parrot!"

Stockers struggle to stretch streak

Stockers North Americans had a tough struggle Tuesday before they extended an unbeaten string to 14 games with a 2-1 nod over Bemister's Welding in a Victoria Senior Women's Softball League game at Hyacinth Park.

Debbie Derkson pitched a three-hitter to spark Stockers, who improved their record to 11-0-3. Lee Wallace, Crystal Lockyer and Lisa Atkinson each contributed two hits to the Stocker attack.

Mavis Underwood earned the pitching triumph for Butlers as clubmates Esther Shackelly, Lisa Underwood and Gina Olsen came up with two hits each.

In Heywood Men's League play, Don Frapton and Doug Hansen each smashed a home run to lead Brentwood to a 12-4 win over Ingraham Hotel at Heywood Avenue Park.

Brentwood scored 11 runs in the last four innings to back the six-hit pitching of Stan Pritchard, who struck out seven batters.

At Macdonald Park, Ash Douglass bashed a homer to lead the way as Strathcona Hotel tripped Victoria Ambulance 8-4 and Birch Builders recorded a 10-7 decision over Trafalgar Legion in Macdonald Men's League play.

Franklin arrested

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Jockey Ronnie Franklin, who rode Spectacular Bid to victories in two of the three Triple Crown races this year, was arrested in the parking lot at Disneyland on Monday for investigation of possession of cocaine.

An Anaheim police watch commander, Sgt. Tom Beardman, said a Disneyland security officer reported that he observed someone in a car "cutting a white substance with a razor," and the arrest was made by Anaheim police.

The arrested man, Ronald Joseph Franklin, 19, gave his occupation as a jockey and a home address in Baltimore, Md., the police spokesman said. Three others who were in the same car were released, Beardman said.

A conviction for possession of cocaine, a felony, carries a penalty of one year or more in state prison — subject to the discretion of the judge.

Running star seeks asylum

NUREMBURG, West Germany (AFP) — Ugandan John Aki-Bua, gold medal winner in the 1976 Olympic Games 400 metres, says that he has fled his country and is seeking asylum in any country that will accept him.

Aki-Bua arrived this week from Nairobi to join his wife and three children, who have been here for several weeks.

He did not give any explanation for his voluntary exile.

Walstrom on Pan-Am team

DELESALLE ALSO NAMED

TORONTO (CP) — A gymnastics meet, aimed at selecting members to Canada's Pan-American Games and World Student Games teams, concluded Tuesday night with the formal naming of the respective squads.

Philip Delesalle of Victoria, the pommel horse specialist and reigning national men's champion who already has earned a spot on the squad, withdrew from the competition at York University's Glendon College, thereby leaving only seven gymnasts to compete for the seven spots on the Pan-Am team — six competitors and one alternate.

Also heading to Puerto Rico next week for the Pan-Am Games are third-ranked Jean Choquette of Montreal, winner of the meet with 109.45 points; Marc Epprecht, Toronto, 109.40 points; Warren Long, a Canadian who lives in Berkeley, Calif., 108.05 points; Nigel Rothwell, Windsor, Ont., 107.25 points; Owen Walstrom, Victoria, 106.70 points, and Montrealers Andre Vallerand and Pierre Clavel, tied with 106.35 points each.

Since the World Student Games will include only optional routines, three others — Winnipeg-born Marty Sharp, who trains in California, Toronto's Dave Steeper and Montreal's Yves Dion — competed for a shot at the team heading to Mexico in September, but failed.

Selected to the Student Games squad were Choquette, Epprecht, Long and Vallerand.

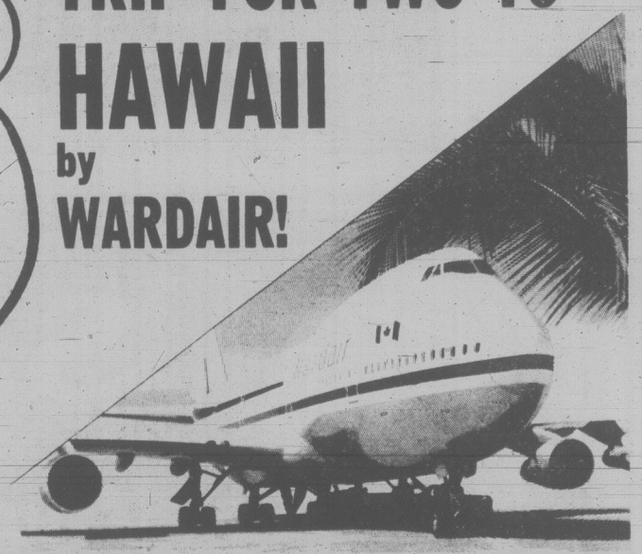
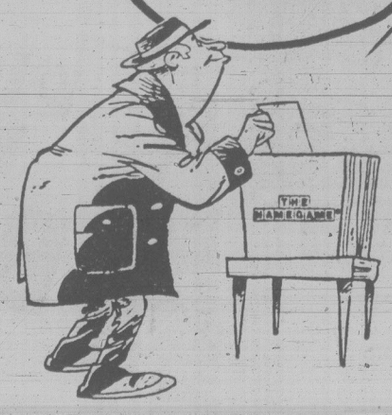
PLAY THE NAME GAME DAILY & SUNDAY ™

STARTING THIS WEEK-END IN THE SATURDAY TIMES AND SUNDAY COLONIST

$1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII by WARDAIR!





YOUR NAME COULD BE A WINNER! Your name is all it takes to play the game and get in on the $1,000.00 in cash prizes every other week. In addition, all entries go into the GRAND PRIZE DRAW. The rules below explain this fascinating Name Game. Read them carefully and see for yourself how easy it is to play. Get in on the FIRST NAME GAME THIS WEEK-END!

THE NAME GAME Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and Ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only 1 entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.

Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.

2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday and Sunday and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist but may only be used once in any one entry.

3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.

4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.

5. All correctly completed entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.

6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.

7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.

8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.

9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to The Name Game will be final.

Bad night for Billy to make his return

By Associated Press

Billy Martin picked a bad night to come back home to Yankee Stadium. Only two American League home teams were winners Tuesday and Martin's New York Yankees weren't one of them.

The fiery Martin took over as manager of the defending World Series baseball champions from Bob Lemon, the man who replaced Martin when Billy resigned last July, and also coached at third base as Toronto edged New York 5-4. The Blue Jays were one of five victorious visiting teams Tuesday.

Elsewhere, Detroit Tigers won in Boston for the first time after 12 successive losses at Fenway Park, 10-4 in 14 innings over the Red Sox; Baltimore Orioles won their fifth straight game, a 6-4 verdict at Cleveland against the Indians; Texas Rangers edged California Angels 2-1 at Anaheim, and Seattle Mariners won in Chicago 7-2 over the White Sox. The only home teams to win were Oakland A's, a 6-5 winner over Kansas City Royals, and Milwaukee Brewers, who outslugged Minnesota wins 10-9.

"Just being back in uniform is great," Martin said. "You don't realize how much you miss the game until you're gone for as long as I was."

The Yankees weren't much more effective under Martin than they'd been recently under Lemon. Light-hitting Luis Gomez broke a 3-3 tie when he drove in his first two runs of the season with a bases-loaded single in the sixth inning.

New York almost won it in the bottom of the ninth. Thurman Munson led off with a bloop single to centre and Graig Nettles, who had a two-run homer earlier, drove a fly ball to deep right field.

"It was hanging up in the air," said Toronto right fielder Joe Cannon, who was inserted as a defensive replacement the inning before. "I got back as far as I could and got lucky and brought it down. I was really trying to keep it from going out; I think it would have hit the top of the fence."

Toronto's victory deprived Tommy John, 10-3, of becoming the first 11-game winner in the majors. It was the third straight time he had failed to win his 11th game.

Meanwhile in the National League, Phil Niekro, well rested after getting beaned by a pitch last Friday night, was back in fine form.

'Looking as good as new, Niekro beat Philadelphia Phillies for the sixth straight time, 10-4.

"It always seems I pitch well against Philadelphia, and I really don't know why," said Niekro, who hasn't lost to the Phillies since Aug. 31, 1977, and holds a lifetime mark of 22-12 over his East Division rivals.

In other NL games, Montreal Expos nipped Cincinnati Reds 3-2, Houston Astros defeated New York 3-1, Pittsburgh Pirates stopped San Francisco Giants 9-4, Chicago Cubs trimmed Los Angeles Dodgers 7-4 and St. Louis Cardinals whipped San Diego Padres 7-2.

NOTICE TO SAANICH

DOG OWNERS

As a convenience to dog owners and to provide employment opportunities, a house-to-house dog licence canvass has commenced in the Municipality of Saanich.

Canvassers are provided with dog licence tags, receipt books and identification and are authorized to collect fees and issue licences at the door. You are requested to immediately affix the dog licence and advised to retain your receipt. Your co-operation when the canvasser calls will be appreciated.

"Any person who owns, possesses or harbours any dog over the age of six months shall obtain a licence therefor in accordance with the provisions of this by-law on or before the first day of February in each year, provided however, that if he becomes the owner, possessor or harbourer of a dog after the first day of February in any year, he shall obtain a licence therefor forthwith.

A portion of the fee schedule from the said by-law is as follows:

"(1) For every dog over the age of six months:

(a) The sum of $5.00 for each male dog.

(b) The sum of $5.00 for each spayed female dog provided, however, that a certificate from a veterinary surgeon to the effect that a female has been spayed shall be accepted in lieu of the licence fee for the calendar year in which the same was spayed.

(c) The sum of $15.00 for each female dog which is not spayed."

For further particulars, reference should be made to By-law No. 2893.

Diego: his play has magic and art

By CHARLES KRAUSE

BUENOS AIRES (WP) — Remember the name Diego Maradona. He is about to become the next great international soccer star.

Cesar Menotti, who coached Argentina's national team to victory in the World Cup soccer championship last June, says without the slightest hesitation that Maradona, who is but 18 years old, "can only be compared to Pele."

"He is like a magician," Menotti rhapsodized. "His play has magic and art in it."

Menotti and virtually every other "futbol" expert in Argentina think Maradona has a long and brilliant career ahead of him, so long and so brilliant that Maradona soon may be known throughout the world simply as "Diego," as the great Brazilian star is known simply as Pele.

Soccer players usually hit their peak at about 26. But Maradona already is so good, so clever and so fast that his team, Argentinos Juniors, is in first place in the Metropolitan Buenos Aries professional soccer league virtually on the strength of Maradona's play alone.

Fans pour into the stadiums here where the juniors play just to marvel at the player who, in just six months, has burst from relative obscurity to become the greatest and most popular player in Argentina.

He is the country's leading professional scorer, a demon on the field who uses every part of his body, from the tip of his heel to the top of his head, to manipulate the ball with deadly accuracy. He is an expert at fooling goalies into thinking he will do one thing and, at the last second, doing another.

What is particularly thrilling for soccer fans — the reason Menotti calls Maradona "a magician" — is that he always surprises them as well as opponents with his play. He has not settled into a predictable style, nor are his moves "professional" and conservative, as is often the case with older soccer players.

Maradona, however, is almost unknown abroad. Menotti cut him from the national team last year before the World Cup — largely because he was afraid to expose the young player to international competition too early in his career.

But Menotti now has decided that Maradona's time has come. The short, compact midfielder, whose appearance even reminds soccer fans of the fabulous Pele, has been selected by Menotti for Argentina's new national team.

Already, Barcelona, the great Spanish club, has offered Argentinos Juniors $2.5 million for Maradona. It was in the process of negotiating a new contract with their star that will raise his salary from $5,000 a month to at least $15,000 a month "Livapio," which means after taxes, social security and everything else.

The Juniors also have bought Maradona and his family a house in Buenos Aires as well as a car and anything else he has asked for — to make him as happy as any 18-year-old possibly could be.

What makes Maradona's rise to fame and fortune even more gratifying, for himself, his family and his fans, is the depths from which he came. It is a real-life Horatio Alger story; a kid who grew up in the slums of Buenos Aires from a family with seven children, who began playing junior league soccer when he was 10.

Within five years, he was playing professionally for Argentinos Juniors. This year, he came into his own. Newspapers follow his every move, hang on his every word and watch his every game. There have been special sports supplements devoted just to him.

"It's nice when the people recognize me in the street and when they yell my name in the stadium," he said in a recent interview. But "I can't have a private life. I can't go out to a bar at night. I am only 18, nothing's easy."

He also is kept away from family and friends. Now that he is on the national team, he is expected to remain in the training camp on the outskirts of the city from Monday until Saturday afternoon. On Sundays, he plays with the Juniors. He sees his parents and brothers and sisters, with whom he is close, only about once a month.

But, aside from the money, there are other rewards. He recently met Pele, "my idol," who advised him on how to manage both his money and his private life.

"We didn't talk very much about futbol," Maradona said. "My impression of Pele is that he has had problems in his life, but that he is a wonderful person."

For Maradona, it is all just beginning. If he is as great as Menotti and others think he will earn a fortune, play for Argentina in the 1982 World Cup and become a household name to soccer fans around the world.

Firmani gets job at higher salary

NEW YORK (AP) — Eddie Firmani, an unemployed coach just 17 days, has signed a three-year contract with New Jersey Americans of the American Soccer League at a figure in excess of his deal with New York Cosmos of the North American Soccer League.

The 45-year-old Firmani coached the Cosmos to successive NASL titles after coming over from Tampa Bay midway through the 1977 season. He was fired last June 1 in a dispute with management.

Firmani said the Cosmos have agreed to buy out the remaining 1½ years of his $75,000-a-year contract and that he expects full payment by Friday. Joe Raymond, the president of the ASL and owner of the Americans, refused to disclose the terms of Firmani's contract but said it was for substantially more than he made with the Cosmos.

The ASL, despite being the oldest soccer league in the U.S., is considered second-rate compared with the younger but more stable NASL. The Americans, struggling with a 3-8 record, play in Rutgers Stadium in Piscataway, averaging less than 4,000 spectators a game.

Firmani takes over for Arthur Stewart, who was fired Thursday in his first year with the team.

Golf tourney slated Friday

Players are scheduled to start at the following times Friday afternoon in the fifth annual Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce Golf tournament at the Uplands course:

Aussie rationing 'chaos'

SYDNEY (Reuter) — Australia's first day of gasoline rationing since the Second World War caused chaos Wednesday with motorists wondering when they could buy fuel and most service stations already out of supplies.

The New South Wales' state government introduced rationing Tuesday to conserve fuel supplies cut off by striking refinery operators in Sydney.

The strike over pay and working conditions is part of a major industrial crisis facing Australians this week with national stoppages to come Thursday in protest against the arrest of union officials in western Australia for illegally addressing striking iron ore workers.

Police reported gasoline rationing started badly in Sydney because motorists did not understand the regulations.

Motorists can buy a maximum $5.50 worth of gasoline on an even day of the month if their number plate ends in an even number. Car owners with number plates ending in odd numbers can buy gasoline on odd days of the month.

Police said there had been several inquiries about whether June 20 is an even day and some motorists with number plates ending in zero didn't know when they could buy gasoline.

"We have told motorists that zero is an even number," a police spokesman said.

Lines outside service stations had cars with both odd and even number plates and harrassed attendants at self-service stations could not impose the $5 purchase limit.

Service station association officials said already 80 per cent of Sydney's gas stations were without fuel because of panic buying in anticipation of rationing. Long lines formed at stations, causing traffic jams.

Road crash kills woman from Nanaimo

NANAIMO (CP) — A 35-year-old Nanaimo woman was killed Tuesday night when her car crashed head-on into a pickup truck on the Trans-Canada Highway five kilometres south of here.

RCMP said the victim, whose name was withheld, was travelling south in the northbound lane at the time of the crash.

Fish union protests

About 100 fishermen and shoreworkers demonstrated at the legislature today to back demands for a full investigation of foreign intrusion in the fishing industry.

Members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union came from several coastal points to drive home their demand that the environment ministry impose a moratorium on fish processing licenses.

The UFAWU also wants the provincial government to insist on full disclosure of all the corporations moving into the province's fishing industry.

The union wants to end the issuing of licenses that allow processing at sea.

While union officials met with ministry officials the workers paraded outside the buildings carrying signs and chanting "save our jobs."

George Hewison UFAWU general secretary, said if off-shore processing and processing in foreign countries continues at the same pace, up to 2,500 of the 3,500 peak season jobs could be lost to the province.

Environment Minister Rafe Mair who met with a UFAWU delegation, said the immediate action the union had demanded isn't possible largely because of overlapping jurisdiction with Ottawa.

But he said he recognizes the problem is a major one and is getting the fullest attention from his ministry.

Thursday the plan is to go into effect in New Jersey and also in some areas of Virginia and Maryland if the situation does not improve.

Under the plan, used during the 1974-75 Arab oil embargo and now operating in the Washington area and California, drivers with odd-numbered licence plates can buy gas only on odd-numbered days of the month. Those with even-numbered plates may only buy on even-numbered days.

The New York plan requires that starting June 30 gas stations must stay open for at least one weekend day.

Gov. Hugh Carey of New York declared an energy and fuel emergency and called on President Carter to investigate the legitimacy of the shortage.

He said rationing may be extended to the rest of the state.

In Washington, the Pentagon said military fuel dealers are defaulting on contracts to provide gasoline and oil for the U.S. armed forces.

Eight suppliers defaulted on military contracts last year. That number has risen to 17 so far this year.

The truckers' walkout was expected to halt the movement of large quantities of produce where the harvest is in full swing and of gasoline supplies.

"We're not trying to hurt anybody," Hill said. "But we're being hurt by the oil industry (which) is holding back supply in order to raise prices."

Hill said the industry was smarting under the burden of diesel fuel price hikes of about 40 cents per gallon since last September.

The shutdown, Hill said, is a "protest against the oil industry.

Model plane buzzing for the Arctic boffins

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Flying a model airplane 650 miles from the North Pole could be a hobbyist's idea of one-upmanship.

For Dave Topham, aeronautical engineer, the flights near Devon Island are providing research data on sea ice and the Arctic Ocean for the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay.

Scientists studying ice formation had no accurate means of getting instrument readings on the polynia phenomenon, an area of warmer open water within growing ice.

Topham, as a member of the frozen sea research group at IOS, saw the possibilities of having a radio-controlled model drone fly a grid pattern over a polynia to transmit remote measurements of temperature, barometric pressure, and light reflection denoting when the craft is over ice or water.

The group came up with a technique at half the cost of full-size planes.

Conventional aircraft for Arctic surveys cost $1,500-$2,000 a day or about $10,000 per field trip, and besides are too large to make accurate measurements of polynias which typically are no larger than 130 acres.

"We realized there was no other way of doing what we wanted unless drones were used," Topham said.

He was familiar with model craft and was aware of their value as drones in other applications, but there was nothing available that would quite meet Arctic requirements.

Specifications were drawn up and private contractor Ron Shetler of Vernon designed a craft weighing 20 pounds that could carry 10 pounds of instruments, batteries and fuel.

The eight-foot wing uses styrofoam and plastic film and the fuselage is made of styrofoam and light arborite, which is unaffected by temperature and humidity extremes, is easily repaired and will float if the craft gets dunked.

Part of the electronic package carried on board is a location transmitter that gives monitoring equipment accurate position fixes simultaneously with the scientific data. These signals are recorded for plotting and data processing.

At least two members of the field crew which visited the sea ice this spring were trained to fly the model, using a remote control transmitter of a type used conventionally by model aircraft flyers.

On-site testing was successful and further development of the system will follow.

Fog, which is prone to form over a polynia, creates two problems for the scientists. A satisfactory method of measuring it during flights has to be developed, and of allowing the operator to maintain control when the craft is screened by fog.

Although drones may be flown at any range within sight of the operator, they can also go temporarily out of sight and remain flying if they are fitted with special navigation equipment.

Topham said this would add expense to the project and additional weight to the plane.

The only refinement being considered at present to give technical improvement is a small, lightweight radar that will function accurately as a low-level altimeter.

Though Doug Preston doesn't know much about the subject, he will travel to Yendi in northern Ghana in September to work on a cattle-breeding project.

The University of Victoria student is part of Canadian Crossroads International whose members across the country are dedicated to fostering intercultural understanding and education.

"We're definitely not an aid organization," explains local Crossroads committee member Maureen Mark. "The purpose of Crossroads, which got started in Canada in 1968, is to give Canadians experience directly in developing countries, from an equal position rather than from an aid position."

When people are selected by Crossroads, they go to a developing country in Africa, Asia or the Caribbean for four months' work on development projects such as helping to build schools or community centres, teaching or working with youth groups.

"Unlike CUSO people, though, we're not going in as experts," Maureen points out. "We go in and work alongside people where we can help but not create a gap when we leave."

Crossroads has area representatives in each place — nationals of the particular country, not foreigners sent in — who decide where the volunteers are needed to go and work.

The whole thing is an exchange program, too, with people coming each year from the developing countries to find out what life is like in Canada. In the summer, 18 will visit the country, including David Kuema of Zambia who will stay in Victoria and Maureen Onuigbo from Nigeria who will go to Courtenay. And there will be another 12 from overseas visiting Canada in the fall.

As well as Doug Preston, two other Victorians are getting the chance of overseas experience this summer. Right now, in fact, Anne Fraser is working as a swimming instructor at the YM-YWCA in Barbados and Susan Siska will leave in July for Kenya.

Like others involved in Crossroads programs, the three Victorians are committed to two years' part-time voluntary service once they get back to Canada. They'll show slides on the places they worked to service groups, get involved with schools programs or work on local committees.

To finance the work overseas, each person going must raise $750 with things like bottle drives and bikeathons and by giving talks to groups. (Anyone wishing to get Doug to talk on Crossroads can reach him at 384-9407).

For each person going overseas the local committee also has to collect another $750 and this total of $1,500 per worker is matched by grants from the Canadian International Development Agency (CIDA).

Amounts raised by volunteers and local committees are matched again by governments in provinces like Alberta and Saskatchewan. However, a fund set up for this sort of thing by the previous NDP government has been frozen by the Socred administration.

Crossroads is holding a fund-raising dinner next Sunday at 7 p.m. at the Shahnai Restaurant at 1010 Langley.

The work overseas by Crossroads will be explained in a presentation at the dinner and Pearson College professor Dr. Wee Chong Tan will talk on Canada's role in international development. (Anyone interested should phone Judy Matthew at 381-5090 or John Gawthrop at 477-2579 for reservations).

The "high level goal" of Canadian Crossroads International is One World; Understanding. While that is, indeed, an admirable thing to strive for, we're a long, long way from achieving it. And while most people would agree with the aims, few of us do any striving.

The young people of Crossroads are both realizing the need for more intercultural understanding and are doing something about it. As Judy Matthew says:

"We're an organization built on people — both here and overseas. A lot of people giving their time and energy toward a one-world concept."

Man dies in fall off cliff

Howard Brian Planes did not respond to aid given by paramedics and was dead on arrival at Victoria General Hospital.

He received multiple head injuries and fractures.

Sooke RCMP said Planes, his brother Darrell, 24, and a friend, Rick George, were about 300 yards north of Sooke Potholes Park at 7:15 when Planes fell from a bluff into a foot of water.

Harbor traffic study

Transport Canada and Victoria city have launched a joint study of air and marine traffic in the Inner Harbor.

A Transport Canada official said today the study began Tuesday and will last until the end of August.

Researchers will be keeping close tabs on harbor traffic throughout the summer months, determining not only how much traffic there is but where it is going within the harbor area.

A similar study was undertaken in September, 1977.

Chamber of Commerce president Mel Cooper said he's pleased that the study has been launched and that the federal and municipal governments are working together.

The chamber has been urging the council to initiate such a study to help with planning for the harbor's future use.

"Our main concern is the safety aspect," said Cooper.

In recent years the harbor has become congested with traffic and some city officials have expressed concern about possible collisions between air and marine traffic.

Another body blow handed Broadmead's shop centre

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

The proposed Broadmead Village shopping centre would harm existing shopping centres in Saanich and be detrimental to the business health of downtown Victoria, says municipal planner Gil Laurenson.

In a 16-page analysis presented to Saanich council's planning committee Tuesday night, Laurenson recommended rejection of the $10 million project proposed by a partnership of the Broadmead Farms Ltd. and The Bay.

His recommendation has already been endorsed by the Advisory Planning Commission. Both the planner's and APC's reports will now be referred to a special meeting July 11 when all council members are expected to be present.

A spokesman for the developers said last week he still hoped council would give rezoning approval for the development, but that appears unlikely in the light of Laurenson's heavily negative report.

He says there is no apparent need for any major increase in shopping centre facilities in the metropolitan area until 1991, and even after that date any increase in sales could be accommodated by extension of small centres rather than one or two regional centres.

In Saanich alone, Laurenson notes, more than 80,000 square feet of retail space has been provided or is under construction since 1976.

The Broadmead shopping centre has been on the developers' planning books for almost a decade, and Mayor Mel Couvelier publicly warned them several months ago that Saanich was not prepared to wait indefinitely for a firm proposal.

Laurenson acknowledges that since 1970 the planning department has "accepted" that a centre would be developed on the 32-acre site east of the Pat Bay Highway.

"However, with the adoption of the Saanich urban containment policy and the Agricultural Land Reserve it had been assumed that it would not be a centre of regional scale, but that a quality specialty centre of neighborhood size would now be more appropriate to the location."

Among specific objections the planner claims that:

— An attractively-designed regional shopping centre at Broadmead, providing ease of access and parking convenience, would be "to the detriment of existing businesses and the downtown area particularly if the development of a regional centre is premature."

— There would be a signifcant increase in traffic along Royal Oak Drive and Douglas Street.

— And the centre would have a major impact on the environment through the removal of mature oak trees and the possible detrimental effects of storm drainage from parking areas into Rithet's Bog.

Three facing burglary charges after Central Saanich shooting

Three persons have been charged with breaking and entering with intent to steal after an incident late Monday in which a 32-year-old Oak Bay man was shot twice by Central Saanich police.

The wounded man, John Pilatzke, of 4533 Densmore, is in serious but stable condition at Victoria General Hospital.

Two others, Lori Still, 24, of 2549 Dowler and 3134 Alder, and Robert John Woolcock, 23, of 3459 Plymouth, appeared in provincial court Tuesday and were remanded without plea to June 27.

Police investigating a report of a burglary in progress went to Fay's Brentwood One-Hour Cleaning, 7183 West Saanich.

Officers saw a car speeding away and gave chase in a patrol car.

A constable in a second patrol car found a broken window and entered the building to be confronted by a man holding what appeared to be a knife.

Chief Bob Miles said the officer demanded that the man drop the weapon and then fired a warning shot when the man came towards him.

The warning shot was ignored and the constable fired three more shots, striking the intruder in chest and shoulder.

'Pull your share' of lumber or leave

Trouble in forest industry operations has taken a slightly different twist with MacMillan Bloedel sending home workers at its Chemainus operation because they were not working hard enough.

The afternoon shift of about 600 workers was sent home Tuesday as was the graveyard shift at the planer mill early this morning.

A company spokesman said the rest of the sawmill is operating today and it is not likely the whole operation would be shut down.

Meanwhile, more than 1,800 woods employees in the Lake Cowichan-Port Renfrew area remain off the job as members of the International Woodworkers of America protest against the pace of industry negotiations in Vancouver.

Pickets were set up Tuesday on roads leading to about six logging sites or sawmills.

An emergency meeting of committees from the affected operations was held but union officials were unable to convince the men to go back to work.

The contract for about 30,000 coastal woodworkers expired last Thursday and some of the IWA members don't want to work without an agreement.

$3,450 in damage by rampaging driver

Police said starting from the 600-block Pandora, the driver hit three cars and a pole on Broad, View, and Government and went two blocks the wrong way on Fort before coming to rest on Wharf.

Information sought on missing canoeist

Police appealed today for information on a missing Saanich man whose empty canoe was found two months ago drifting in Coles Bay.

Anyone with any information about Chester Joseph Coons, 47, is asked to contact detectives Bill Chisholm or Fred Brodersen at 388-4321.

Coons left his home about 9 a.m. April 18. Later that day his maroon 1976 pickup truck was found parked on Lawrence Road in Central Saanich where Coons had a summer cabin.

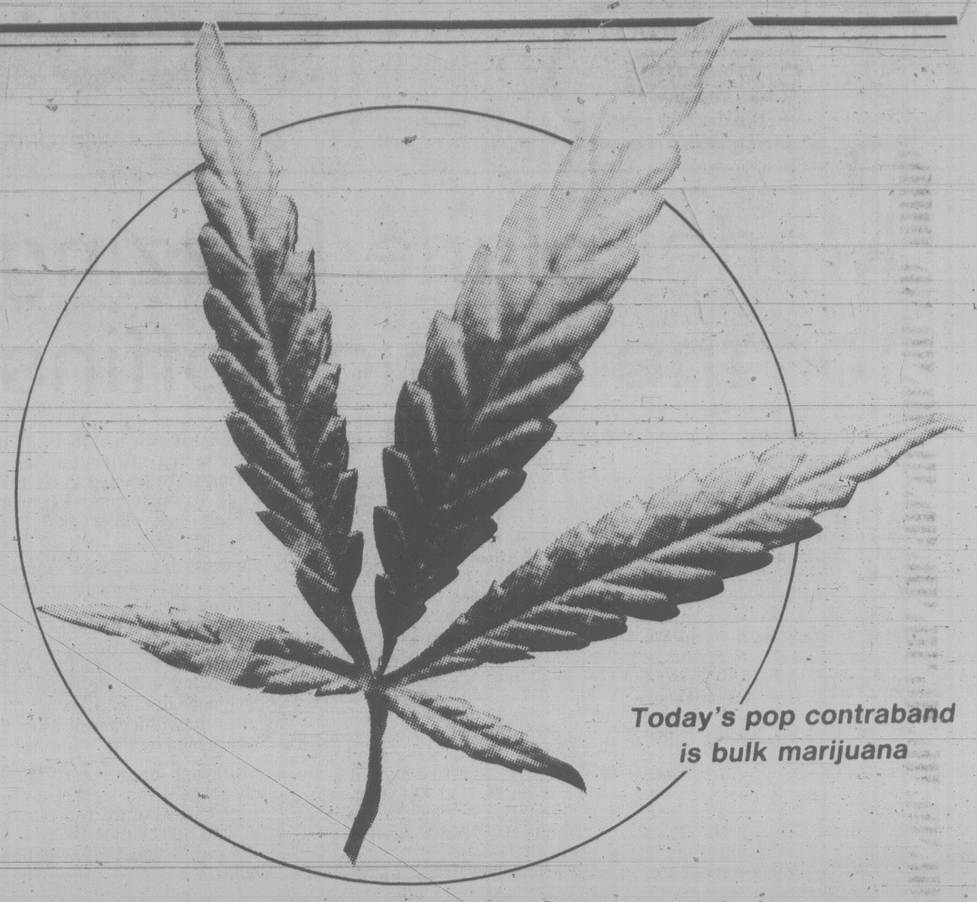
Rugged west coast made to order for the smugglers who are making it a major transfer point for drug shipments

It's prohibition again...pot-style

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff



Today's pop contraband is bulk marijuana

Not since the days of prohibition has the Pacific Northwest seen so much smuggling activity.

In those days the contraband was liquor, shipped out of B.C. in practically anything that would float bound for secret hideaways along the wild and irregular coastline of Washington and Oregon states.

The legacy of that period has lingered on in a plethora of place names — Smuggler's Cove, Rum Island, Whiskey Point. It is a matter of record that some prominent B.C. families made their fortunes in the trade, which was only illegal south of the border.

Today the contraband is marijuana, brought in by small freighters out of South America, Hawaii and Southeast Asia and the secret hideaways have come alive again.

Drug officers can only guess the extent of the smuggling operation. But judging by the big drug busts that have been made in the northwest in the past 18 months — 85 tons of marijuana and 12½ tons of potent Thai sticks — this area is clearly becoming an important transfer point for overseas drug shipments.

Officers believe they are intercepting only about 10 per cent of the shipments.

If true, then more than 900 tons with a street value of about $1.5 billion have been successfully landed in this region in the past year and a half.

Donald Eide, district director of customs in Seattle, says a smuggler can send out three mother ships, lose two, and still make a bundle.

The northwest is ideal for smuggling purposes. The coastline is rugged, deeply indented, and sparsely populated. Moreover, says Capt. Rick Cueroni, director of operations for the U.S. Coast Guard in Seattle, there are no natural choke points on the West Coast as there are in the Caribbean to set up blockades.

While the Caribbean remains unquestionably the principal marijuana distribution route into North America, the Coast Guard feels it can eventually win the battle against the drug shippers there.

This coast, however, poses an entirely different and much more complex set of problems.

Small steamers can ply the coast outside the 200-mile limit unnoticed and unimpeded. They can dart in almost any place, unload the cargo on to runner vessels — tugs, fishing boats or sailing ships — and then disappear into the boundless ocean without trace.

The chances of getting caught are about one in 10.

U.S. and Canadian drug authorities are out to cut those odds, and to that end have formed a united front, utilizing a variety of government services notably the U.S. Coast Guard, U.S. Customs Service and Canadian Armed Forces.

Liaison between the Drug Enforcement Agency in Seattle and the RCMP drug section headquarters in Victoria has never been closer.

Finding the enemy is what it's all about. The thrust is two-pronged. One involves setting up an early warning system to detect the presence of suspect vessels in off-shore waters. The other is establishing an intelligence-gathering network in both the drug source and home countries.

The USCG and Canadian forces play a major role in the first of these endeavors.

Their mission is to photograph and monitor the movements of any vessel that falls into the general description of a smuggler boat. In broad terms such vessels are small tramp steamers, 120 to 160 feet long, generally flying Panamanian or Colombian flags.

Flight crews are also supplied with a "look-out list," a list of smuggler vessels known to be active in U.S. waters.

Lt.-Cdr. Dick Wright, chief of intelligence and law enforcement with the USCG in Seattle says there are 20 to 30 names on the list. The number has never exceeded 50.

Neither the DEA nor RCMP will say how many agents they have posted abroad. But Les Tayer, special agent in charge of the DEA in the northwestern U.S., says agents are working in virtually every major drug source country in South and Central America. The RCMP has been expanding its operations in Latin America, too, and is known to have officers in Colombia, Peru and Costa Rica.

The customs service is also involved in collecting intelligence through SCANIT, the special customs and narcotics interdict team.

Of the five major drug busts in the northwest in the past 18 months, two were the result of intelligence gathering.

One was the seizure of 13½ tons of marijuana near Tofino last July. The other was the joint police-armed forces raid in the same area last month which netted 35 tons of the drug.

The first involved the 120-foot Toernyn and 70-foot Weatherly; the second, the 150-foot Samarkanda and 50-foot Whitecap.

Police knew about the Toernyn caper from its inception. The vessel was under constant surveillance from the time it left the torrid Colombian port city of Buenaventura with its cargo holds bursting with marijuana. Satellites tracked the ship for part of the journey.

Last month's bust owes its success to DEA undercover work in the Seattle area. The investigation led officers to the pleasure cruiser, Whitecap, registered in Seattle, and later to a mobile home on Orcas Island where a sophisticated transmitting station had been set up.

The Samarkanda had been photographed by Coast Guard spotters in late April about 12 miles off the U.S. coast.

The vessel wasn't seen again until it entered Shelter Inlet northwest of Tofino the night of May 21.

The three other major drug hauls were the result of either a fortuitous encounter or tip-offs from citizens noticing suspicious activity.

Take the Cigali incident as a case in point. The Cigali was a 147-foot Panamanian freighter nabbed by Coast Guard and customs officers off the Oregon coast near Coos Bay on Dec. 31, 1977. More than 17,000 pounds of Thai sticks were seized in the operation.

The investigation began when residents in the area started to complain that the new owner of a large waterfront farm near Bandon, Ore. was preventing fishermen from getting to the beach, a favorite salmon fishing spot.

The owner put up fences, brought in guard dogs, and anyone who tried to approach the farm was chased away.

Coos Bay customs officer Larry Gano got wind of the reports and decided to do some checking. His suspicions were aroused when he discovered the owner had paid $300,000 for the farm and put down a large cash deposit.

He passed on the information to John Spatuzzi, a Coast Guard law enforcement officer at North Bend. Spatuzzi arranged to have a patrol plane fly over the property and survey what was going on.

Photographs were taken and showed unusually large tire tracks along the beach. An analysis indicated the tracks could have been made by a Second World War vintage amphibious vehicle called a "duck."

Drug officers got a tip a large shipment of cocaine was en route and wondered if the farm was the drop-off point. Air patrols were stepped up.

On Dec. 29 a Coast Guard Hercules out of San Francisco spotted the Cigali approaching the coast. The vessel suddenly turned around and sailed towards the horizon.

A round-the-clock surveillance involving Coast Guard intelligence agents, customs officers and sheriff's deputies was set up to watch over the activities at the farm. Early in the morning of Dec. 31 they noticed two "ducks" entering and leaving the water apparently rendezvousing with a vessel off-shore.

They decided to make their move. Two helicopters carrying heavily-armed, combat-trained police and customs agents were dispatched to the farm. At the same time two Coast Guard cutters moved in on the Cigali. The vessel, moving erratically through the water, had been abandoned, its engine at full throttle. One of the cutters came alongside and officers jumped aboard and stopped the engine. The Cigali was listing badly. Before abandoning the ship the smugglers had tried to scuttle it.

The Coast Guard subsequently picked up the Cigali crew, who had taken to a lifeboat, and recovered 574 bales of Thai sticks floating over an area nearly a mile long and half a mile wide.

The curiosity of the Bandon residents had paid off handsomely. Such was the case, also, in the seizure of 8,000 pounds of Thai sticks found cached near a beach on Barnes Island in Puget Sound last year. A nearby resident had seen suspicious activity and called police.

DEA boss Tayer says the Cigali and Barnes Island operations point out the emergence of Southeast Asia as a major marijuana producing area. Both shipments, organized out of the Boston area, originated in the Far East.

The largest drug seizure ever made in the northwest — 37 tons of marijuana found stashed aboard the 161-foot freighter Helena Star April 17, 1978 — was the result of nothing more than a chance encounter.

The Coast Guard cutter Yocoma was on routine patrol when it sighted the vessel about 60 miles west of Cape Flattery.

Officers became suspicious when they saw the vessel wasn't flying a national flag and radioed the captain to identify himself. He said the ship was registered in Great Britain and was bound for Victoria.

But a check with British authorities showed no record of the ship. The captain then said he'd made a mistake. The ship was registered in Sweden. Again the information proved false. The Helena Star was apparently not registered anywhere and consequently was a stateless vessel.

Seattle Coast Guard intelligence chief Wright says that under international law a stateless vessel may be boarded on the high seas by any nation to determine country of jurisdiction. To find out the country of jurisdiction one must go down into the bowels of the ship and note the main beam number stamped on the keel.

The subsequent DEA investigation revealed more than $2 million had been invested in the smuggling operation.

Vancouver, Seattle: the drug scene differs

In theory you might expect the drug problems in Washington State to be closely allied to those in B.C., given the common border and degree of trade and travel between the two countries.

But a comparison of the drug scenes in Seattle and Vancouver shows that if there is a relationship, it isn't apparent at the street level.

Differences exist not only in the drugs being used but also in trafficking patterns.

In Seattle, for instance, phencyclidine salts, notably the horse tranquilizer PCP, are all the rage. Here they are practically non-existent in the drug subculture.

The heroin, too, is different. Practically all the B.C. heroin is white Asian. In Seattle the majority is brown Mexican.

While heroin is sold in B.C. by the cap, in Seattle it's by the spoon, a teaspoon-sized portion of drug wrapped in silver paper, or a collection of spoons, called a bindle.

Insp. Dave Staples, head of the RCMP drug section in B.C., says number 5 gelatin capsules, the most common packaging material, are more readily obtainable here than in Seattle which explains part of the reason for the difference.

The other part has to do with enforcement techniques.

Not so, in Canada. Officers have broad search and seizure powers. An officer, for example can grab a suspected addict and search him at will.

Addicts consequently carry the drug in containers they can easily get rid of, preferably by swallowing. In terms of quality and price, heroin is the same in both countries.

Les Tayer, special agent in charge of the Drug Enforcement Agency in Seattle, says the drug now being sold on the streets is only about three per cent pure. Even at that low ratio an ounce still fetches about $2,000.

The same figures prevail here, Staples says.

STAPLES

Also, as is the case in both countries, trafficking is highly organized.

In B.C. it is linked to ethnic groups. The third findings report of the Co-Ordinated Law Enforcement Unit cites a strong Chinese connection and evidence of Mafia involvement in the heroin trade in the province.

Tayer says, however, there is no indication of major crime families engaged in heroin trafficking in the Seattle area. Neither, for that matter, is there any ethnic polarization.

Los Angeles is the main source city of the drug for the Seattle market while Hong Kong fills the role for Vancouver dealers.

Tayer says that until the mid-70s it was commonplace for addicts and traffickers to get their supplies in Vancouver.

But increased police pressure resulting in several major busts has all but destroyed this drug route.

Tayer notes there hasn't been a heroin arrest on the border for the past three years.

"The price and purity of the drug in Canada is disproportionate to markets in other areas," he says. "It's cheaper and far less risky to go instead to California."

Police on both sides of the border define their drug problems along similar lines. First, heroin, then hallucinogens, followed by cocaine and marijuana.

If it was based on profits, cocaine would probably take top billing. The drug is by far the most costly, averaging about $2,500 an ounce.

And if the priority was based solely on harm to the body, hallucinogens would be unquestionably the number one problem.

In this regard the situation appears far worse in Seattle than here.

Tayer says the use of PCP, sold on the street as angel dust, rush or canabonal, has reached serious proportions.

The drug's low cost — $3 to $5 a hit — makes it attractive to the very young who snort it or mix it with parsley or tobacco and smoke it.

In the past year DEA officers have knocked off three labs in the northwest, the first in Bend, Ore., the other two in Tacoma and Portland.

Tayer says the effects of the drug have proven even more devastating than LSD.

"Not much is known about the drug," he says. "But it's very frightening what comes out. With heavy abuse the person becomes extremely aggressive and displays often wildly erratic, always violent behavior."

There have been several deaths in the U.S., both murders and suicides, attributed to the drug's use.

Tayer says the advent of the drug is a fairly recent phenomenon that is sweeping the country. It has created such concern that the DEA has set up a special action force in Washington, D.C. to tackle the problem.

New legislation is also being enacted in the U.S. to slap tough controls on the supply and sale of the drug's primary precursor, piperidine.

Piperidine is also one of the chemicals that can be used to manufacture MDA.

Staples says that although PCP is appearing now in eastern Canada, there is no evidence of sales in the west.

Customs: 'A highly selective business'

Of all the U.S. enforcement agencies, none is older or has greater powers than the customs service.

While the collection of duties and taxes remains a large part of the service's work, customs officers see their primary role as watchdogs to check the flow of contraband goods.

But there is nothing simple about the job. With thousands of miles of land and sea border to patrol and millions of tons of cargo passing in and out of the country each year, the chances of coming across contraband is akin to looking for a pin in a silo of grain.

Last year 260 million persons passed through U.S. customs check points, 13 million of them in Eide's district.

The selection process, while it might seem capricious, is actually based on psychological principles ... that and the well-nourished inquisitiveness of the custom's officer.

Eide says officers rely on standard profiles of smugglers and responses to key questions asked during the customs examination; but for obvious reasons he couldn't elaborate.

"We work on the basis that if it looks like an apple and tastes like an apple, then it must be one."

That's not to say officers don't occasionally put the bite on the wrong person.

Screening out suspected smugglers is one thing; determining where and how they have concealed the goods is quite another.

Eide, a 20-year veteran of the service, has a healthy respect for the ingenious methods persons use to smuggle goods.

Narcotics, for example, have been concealed in toothpaste tubes, cans of talcum powder, canned fruit, and even soaked in towels and then let to dry. They've been smuggled in baby's diapers, casts, wooden legs, crutches, and hollowed-out wooden crates.

False bottom suitcases are also fairly common and difficult to detect.

Eide says several of the biggest drug seizures in recent years have been due to nothing more than an officer's intuition something is wrong.

In one case an officer stopped a car at Blaine and not being satisfied with the answers given by the driver, decided to check out the vehicle. Eighteen pounds of heroin were found concealed in a set of stereo speakers in the car.

In another case, an officer at Seatac international airport became suspicious of a visitor arriving from Hong Kong with several bas relief plaster of Paris art works in his possession.

The officer drilled a hole in one of the art works and using a chemical kit tested the dust for heroin. The test was negative. He drilled again with the same result. He tried once more and this time got a positive hit. The art works were subsequently torn apart and 12 pounds of the drug fell out.

To counter the illicit drug trade, the customs service has set up an elite snooper squad called the Special Customs and Narcotics Interdict Team or SCANIT for short.

The team's job is to identify high risk targets and gather intelligence on drug shipments.

There are six teams in operation, three in Seattle, one at Oroville and two at Blaine.

One of the Seattle teams is assigned to the Post Office. Eide says that because of the volume of mail — four to six million packages pass through Seattle each year — custom officers haven't a hope of checking them all.

Enter the dog team. As the packages are sorted on a conveyor, the dog walks against the flow and sniffs them as they go by.

Eide says every now and then the handler has to throw in a parcel containing a known drug, just to make the sure the dog is doing his job.

By MIKE HUGHES
Times Staff

Labor Minister Allan Williams told Victoria building trades officials Tuesday he will do all he can to speed up work on area construction projects, a union spokesman said today.

A delegation of union representatives met the minister for an hour while a group of about 70 unemployed tradesmen held a quiet rally in front of the legislature.

The building trades members are concerned that at a time of record unemployment among their members, work even on approved projects appears to be stalled.

Jack Scott, business agent for the Painters union, said today Williams said he would try to get things moving on such projects as the Helmcken Road hospital, the convention centre, and improvements to Victoria General and Royal Jubilee hospitals.

Scott said he was pleased with the reception given him and the other union officials including, John Schibli, secretary-treasurer of the Vancouver Island Building and Construction Trades Council; Don Strank, business mamager of the Laborers union; Ivan Crossett, business agent for the Plumbers union and Heinz Korn, business agent for the Carpenters union.

Ken Rowell of the Carpenters union told the rally that 365 carpenters in the Victoria area are unemployed, about 35 per cent of the union's local membership.

He said some of them have been out of work for more than a year and 50 have run out of unemployment insurance benefits.

"When you come right down to it, it is bloody heartbreaking," he said.

Rowell said in an interview the problem is nobody seems to care.

He said if the government really cared it "would get on its feet and get things going now."

Victoria NDP MLAs Charles Barber and Gordon Hanson addressed the rally stressing their party's position that more money from the province's resources should remain in B.C. and be invested in job-creating projects.

Barber said the government has cut back on the construction of senior citizen housing and other types of housing projects which would provide work for unemployed tradesmen.

"You have a right to jobs just like you have a right to housing," Barber said.

Saanich torpedoes 'corridor' scheme

Saanich officials were told bluntly by their political bosses Tuesday night to scrap any notion of widening Shelbourne Street to six lanes.

Members of the public works committee were taken aback when they learned that the engineering department has been drawing up tentative plans for a "major transportation corridor" on Shelbourne, including a policy of gradual land acquisition to widen the right-of-way from the present 75 feet to 100 feet.

"The engineers should find another solution besides the six-laning of Shelbourne," said Mayor Mel Couvelier.

Ald. John Mika made his point more forcibly: "I am a little bit concerned because staff appear to talk to each other and have a pretty good idea as to how they think Saanich should go, but they don't bring it to council's attention in such a way that we can grasp what's going on."

Ald. David Paterson said traffic already reaches speeds of up to 50 miles an hour on Shelbourne and he shuddered to think what conditions would be like if the road were widened to three lanes in each direction.

The only committee member disinclined to support the motion to retain the present right-of-way width was Ald. Irene Block, who said such action might preclude any future possibility of widening the artery to cope with traffic growth.

"If there is great pressure of north-south traffic in years to come where are you going to put it? Not on Blenkinsop Road, I hope."

Couvelier replied sarcastically that Block's concern presumably stems from the fact she lives on Blenkinsop.

The right thumb print of a 20-year-old Los Angeles man was found on the handle of a light green clear-glass teapot in the bedroom of a Victoria woman he is accused of murdering, a B.C. Supreme Court jury was told Tuesday.

"It is one and the same, made by the same person," Sgt. Patrick Braiden, chief of the identification section of Victoria police, said of the print on the teapot and a set of prints he took of Tommy Ross Jr.

But he agreed he couldn't swear that the teapot was in the Queens Avenue apartment bedroom of Janice Forbes, 26, on May 14, 1978, when he was called in after her fully-clothed body was found with the wrists tied behind her back and a belt knotted to her right ankle with the other end wrapped around her neck.

Braiden visited the apartment twice May 14 and again May 23 and June 5 but it was not until June 10 that he was directed by another policeman to the teapot which was sitting on top of a dresser in the bedroom.

He told prosecutor Richard Law he hadn't seen the teapot before June 10 and that was why he hadn't checked it for fingerprints May 14.

In court, shown the teapot, he said he could see the thumb print.

He found no other prints of Ross at the scene but added that in 60 to 70 per cent of cases, if police find prints it is average to find just one, two or three and anything in excess of that is unusual.

Cross-examined by defence counsel Douglas Christie, Braiden agreed that fingerprints can be transferred. A print can be lifted by photocopying or scotch-taping and moving but the print won't remain clearly.

But he said the print in question couldn't have been moved there by photocopying and "I say positively that there was no adhesive on that handle" but he did not analyse and was not qualified to analyse for any adhesive being left on the teapot handle.

The jury was shown a blown-up photograph of the dresser taken on June 10 and Braiden said the top measured 36 by 19 or 20 inches. On it were a compact, three vases, an alarm clock, hat, crayon container, books, belt jacket, papers, magazine, statue and the teapot.

He said when he first visited the scene May 14 he was concentrating on the body and the floor immediately adjacent to the body.

Asked if he now implied the reason he did not see the teapot at first was because it was covered by a scarf, he replied "that's what I'm saying, yes. I must have come to the conclusion that I had checked everything but I hadn't."

Braiden said it was his opinion the only way the thumb print could get on the teapot handle was by Ross placing it there.

There was a portion of a palm print and another print over it on the other side of the handle but he did not conduct a microscopic examination.

He said he didn't know who went into the apartment between May 14 and June 10 other than himself and policemen he saw there.

He agreed there was a child's belt 18 to 24 inches long on the dresser but he couldn't recall whether he picked it up.

But when Christie directed him to an answer given at the preliminary hearing, that he picked up and examined the belt, he agreed that he had and that he dealt with the belt on May 14.

The belt was close to the teapot in the June 10 photograph with part of it extending to below the base of the teapot handle.

He said he didn't photograph the dresser top May 14 because certain things had been moved. He didn't think a photograph would have shown where the teapot was.

In other testimony, Braiden said a clump of hair was found underneath the body. There were abrasions to the right side of the neck and immediately below the chin, a slight cut above the right eye, two on the neck, some blackening under the arms, a bruise on the right arm, bruising and some breaks in the skin on the right knee and a portion of her hair had been cut away but not by him or anyone in his presence.

He said there were three pieces of black and brown material wrapped around her neck and similar-type material around her right ankle. The wrists were tied with a black and white striped material. A facecloth was found on the floor under the body in the upper shoulder area with what seemed like a stain on it.

A piece of white material was tied around her neck but it was hanging loosely and it was his impression it had been tied around the mouth previously and had become dislodged and hung around the neck like a bandanna.

A blouse was found on the bed with the left sleeve cut and torn away and a bikini bottom was found on the floor of the bedroom and both sides appeared to have been cut. A bikini top was found on the balcony.

On his subsequent visits May 23 and June 5 he checked for fingerprints in the bathroom and bottles in a closet.

The trial was to continue today with Braiden completing his testimony, followed by pathologist Dr. John Marsen who conducted an autospy.

A man who left the scene of an accident in which a man died early Friday morning was fined $300 and given six months probation after he pleaded guilty in provincial court Tuesday.

Judge Harold Alder told Daniel Hodd, 37, of 2421 Foul Bay, that a jail term of some length would have been imposed if there been any indication he was impaired or responsible for the two-car accident on Sooke Road in which Dale Brissaw, 23, an occupant of the other vehicle, died.

The court was told a dazed and injured Hodd had wandered off from the sight of the accident and sometime after police and the ambulance had left hitch-hiked back to the city. He later took a bus to Vancouver but on hearing that a man had died in the accident returned to Victoria to turn himself in.

A 20-year-old former Sooke man was given a six-month jail sentence after he pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large since April 27.

Alder ordered David McDonald to serve his sentence consecutively to one year remaining on a sentence imposed in Richmond in May, 1977, for burglary offences.

McDonald had failed to return to a halfway house after being given a day pass to seek employment. He said he didn't return because he wanted to escape people who were after him.

Alan Stark, 33, was given a suspended sentence with 12 months probation to include psychiatric counselling after pleading guilty to two charges of carrying a concealed weapon and a charge of failing to appear in court.

Two of the charges were laid last fall in Vancouver. He had been in custody since June 8 after being arrested for the second concealed weapon charge in Victoria.

Judge knocks 10-day delay on juvenile TERRACE (CP) — A provincial court judge demanded Tuesday the attorney-general's ministry investigate why a juvenile was kept in custody for about 10 days before appearing in juvenile court.

Judge Darrell Collins called the incident disgraceful after hearing of the delay when the juvenile appeared before him on charges of robbery and possession of stolen goods.

Crown counsel Tom Bishop said the juvenile was remanded in custody in Vancouver after a warrant had been issued for his arrest on the charges laid here.

The youth told Collins he had been taken from his sister's apartment in Vancouver to a remand centre where he was kept for about 10 days.

On one occasion he was taken to the Vancouver airport by a sheriff's officer but was returned to the remand centre after it was discovered proper papers had not been prepared.

The youth said that when he was finally flown to Terrace, he was handcuffed the entire trip.

The juvenile's mother told Collins that the sheriffs officer would not remove the handcuffs after the youth arrived in Terrace, despite requests by family members who met him at the airport.

The judge remanded the juvenile to Oct. 10.

TOKYO (AP) — A plant that helps dislodge fishbones from throats and also is said to be effective against rheumatism is among 2,000 specimens of wild medicinal herbs planted in a park for visitors to Nanning, in southeast China, the official Xinhua (Hsinhua) news agency reports. Xinhua said the park, set up to promote increased use of traditional medicine, was being visited by foreigners and Chinese from Hong Kong and Macao.

Transport fair step to Olympics?

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

B.C. will bid Wednesday to host a world-class event which could be a forerunner to an application for the 1988 Winter Olympics. The provincial government is offering to host a five-month international exposition on transportation to mark the centeniary of Vancouver in 1986.

Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis said today the submission outlining the B.C. proposal goes before the International Bureau of Expositions in Paris first thing Wednesday.

The IBE will then decide within a day or two whether to reject the bid outright or give it tentative approval that will lead to further investigations into the application over the next year.

Curtis likened the theme exposition to Spokane Washington's 1974 environment exposition and the one on energy to be held in Knoxville, Tenn., in 1982.

The minister refused to put a price tag on the exposition, but said similar fairs have come very close to breaking even. In fact, Knoxville is anticipating $95 million revenues in comparision to an outlay of $84 million.

Vancouver is also making initial motions to host the 1988 Winter Olympics.

Curtis, without committing the provincial government to the Olympic bid, agreed the publicity involved in hosting an event of world calibre would aid the city if it proceeds with its application for the Olympics.

The minister said the idea to host an exposition on transportation initiated with the province.

Deputy provincial secretary Gerry Cross and B.C. Agent-General Laurie Wallace are in Paris to present the B.C. application to the IBE. Canada has a member on the international bureau.

As well as being the centennial of Vancouver's incorporation, 1986 is also the 100th anniversary of the arrival of the first transcontinental train at the Pacific Ocean.

He said the theme for the exposition is appropriate because of the importance of transportation to the city.

It was the railroad that developed Vancouver and today the city is the second largest port in the Americas. It continues to thrive and grow as a transportation centre of world-wide importance, Curtis said.

If B.C. is successful in hosting the exposition, the primary site will be the proposed World Trade and Convention Centre on Vancouver's waterfront.

The air component of the exposition could be held at either Vancouver International Airport or Abbotsford, the minister said.

B.C is competing with other areas to host a class B exposition in the 1985-86 period. At least one other application is expected at tomorrow's meeting, Curtis said.

The IBE must judge between those submissions since only one would be sanctioned for that time period.

But Curtis said he is optimistic the 37-member sanctioning bureau will give B.C. the green light for its proposal.

B.C. election pay delay

There's one more foul-up to add to the long list of complaints surroundings the May 10 provincial election — many polling staff still haven't been paid.

Emery Barnes (NDP—Vancouver Centre) asked Provincial Secretary Hugh Curtis in the legislature to explain the delay. At least 50 workers in his riding alone are still awaiting their pay.

Curtis admitted there was "an unreasonable delay" in the processing and delivery of cheques.

Cheques are now going out, he said. And the ministry is studying ways to speed the operation.

Noted militiaman dies here at 67

Col. Walter Mosedale, who rose from bandsman to commander of the Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's) died in Royal Jubilee Hospital Monday. He was 67.

Born in Victoria and educated in the city, Mosedale from 1928 to 1939 was in the militia, moving through the ranks until he was commissioned in 1934.

In the Second World War, he served overseas as an intelligence officer and served in the reserves from 1946 to 1955.

He was an aide to Governor-General Vincent Massey for four years, served on the Victoria library board and played a major role in the erection of a permanent memorial to the regiment in Pioneer Square, adjacent to Christ Church Cathedral.

Before St. Joseph's Hospital became the Victoria General, Mosedale was for many years chairman of the management board.

He retired as security officer for the defence department at CFB Esquimalt in 1974.

A year later he was appointed honorary lieutenant-colonel of the Canadian Scottish.

He is survived by his widow, Mary, a son Douglas of Vancouver, and a daughter, D. Cecily Quin of Victoria.

Funeral services will be held at McCall Brothers chapel at 1 p.m. Friday.

Romania signs B.C. coal deal

TORONTO (CP) — Quintette Coal Ltd. has signed an agreement with Romania to supply 25 million to 30 million metric tonnes of high quality metallurgical coal from northeast British Columbia in a 20-year period.

Quintette is owned 38.25 per cent by Denison Mines Ltd.; 22.5 per cent by each of Mitsui Mining Overseas Development and Tokyo Boeki Ltd.; and 16.75 per cent by Esso Resources Canada Ltd., a subsidiary of Imperial Oil Ltd.

Romania has indicated a desire to acquire a 10 per cent equity interest in Quintette as part of the arrangements.

C. H. Frame, president of Quintette, said Tuesday deliveries of the coal are expected to start towards the end of 1982 at an initial rate of 1.3-to-1.5 million tonnes a year.

The coal will be shipped from the new bulk coal terminal at Prince Rupert.

Aid area extended

The addition of a nine-block area to the Resident Rehabilitation Assistance Program in Esquimalt will conclude a municipal planning program introduced three years ago to stabilize and improve single-family and duplex housing.

Council was told approval had been given to increasing the designation by adding the area bounded by Admirals and Head streets north of Esquimalt Road, including Grenville and Old Esquimalt.

Residents of the area, which includes some of the community's oldest homes, may apply for assistance to upgrade the quality of housing.

Feds get briefing by Mair

Topics ranging from Japanese control of B.C.'s fish-processing industry to clean-up of oil spills have been discussed by federal Fisheries Minister Jim McGrath and provincial Environment Minister Rafe Mair.

Mair, also responsible for fisheries, said following a one-hour meeting that McGrath was well-briefed about B.C.'s problems and while he offered no solutions, "he knew what the questions were and that's refreshing."

"He said we have a shared resource to manage so let's get together and manage it. I find this very encouraging and very refreshing."

McGrath said the meeting was the first in a series of consultations with the provinces and although he didn't have any answers for B.C. problems he expects the next meeting here in late summer or early fall will be more productive.

"I've been minister of fisheries for Canada for two weeks and a day," he said. "I think I'm doing very well to be in Victoria right now."

Later in Prince Rupert, McGrath said there is a possibility that fishing boundary negotiations on Canada's West Coast will be reopened.

He said a directive already has been issued to the department of fisheries and oceans calling for a total review of policy commitments, including international pacts. A reopening of talks would be a priority, he said.

Capozzi's wallet, ego take a beating

VANCOUVER (CP) — Herb Capozzi came to conquer in Tuesday's $10,000 winner-take-all grudge racquetball match with another high-profile, middle-aged Vancouver millionaire — but today he is nursing a bruised ego.

Dressed like a Roman legionnaire, Capozzi, the owner of Vancouver Whitecaps of the North American Soccer League and a former MLA, arrived at the downtown YMCA in a vintage Packard driven by a friend wearing a Superman outfit.

Also piling out of the vehicle were several other Capozzi supporters attired in Roman togas and laurel-wreaths.

The apparent psyche job was not enough, however, as the victory laurels went to Nelson Skalbania, a real estate developer who once owned Indianapolis Racers of the World Hockey Association and was part-owner of Edmonton Oilers hockey club.

Skalbania edged Capozzi 21-18, 10-21 and 21-18 in the gruelling, two-hour match, and the winner said it was no easy task.

"He's sort of a bear of a guy, and he comes on strong . . . but he got a little tired in the third game, as I did."

The millionaire jocks each put up $5,000. Skalbania said his winnings will go toward construction of two new courts at the downtown YMCA.

He had promised recently to contribute $200,000 for the construction of the courts — on the condition that he received permanent late-afternoon court reservations.

"I need my time to earn dollars, and if I can save time by knowing when I can play, I can use that time to earn dollars so I can pay for the courts."

Chinese operas coming

A 25-member troupe of actors and musicians from Hong Kong will participate in two spectacular Chinese operas at the MacPherson Playhouse at 7.30 p.m. June 24 and 25.

The Sing Bo Cantonese Opera, sponsored by the Chinese Dart Coon Club of Victoria, is currently on a cross-Canada tour.

On June 24, the company will perform Yut Doy Tin Kew, a historical opera, and on June 25, Yuke Mah Ching Till Gum Fone Wong, a love story.

UVic man elected president

The Canadian Political Science Association (CPSA) has elected Dr. Walter Young, chairman of the University of Victoria's political science department, as its president.

Young was elected at an annual meeting this month in Saskatoon by the 1,000-member CPSA. The organization is made up of political scientists from the academic world and from public service across Canada.

Travel claims cleared

Consumers who lost money when AirClub International declared bankruptcy five years ago now may file claims to recover some of their losses, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Jim Neilsen said Tuesday.

Neilsen said about 1,150 Canadians, most of them from B.C., lost deposits when the American charter air club declared bankruptcy in 1974.

He said a judge in Seattle recently ordered AirClub to compensate nearly 3,000 consumers from both the United States and Canada for money lost when the club folded.

The Egg.

(And how we improved on it.)

The egg is nature's most efficient, streamlined shape. Now, the egg's unique, functional beauty has inspired the most innovative design in travel trailers in years: the Boler Egg.

Aerodynamically designed and built with light-weight fibreglass construction, the Boler Egg is the answer to today's ever-increasing demands for fuel economy.

2 Our Egg has a bright, roomy interior (completely insulated) with extra large windows. Most eggs don't.

3 It comes in two convenient sizes: Grade A Large 1300, and popular Extra Large 1700.

4 The Boler Egg has totally sealed construction. It's maintenance-free. And it never needs refrigeration (it has its own).

6 Other eggstras: dual 20 lb. propane tanks, electric power converter, and two 14"x 14" roof vents for added ventilation.

No exemptions on school exams

Education Minister Pat McGeer said Tuesday he does not want any exemptions from the new version of departmental exams being written this week by B.C. high school students.

McGeer said the exams are designed to cover the basics contained in the core curriculum.

The exams aren't compulsory, he said, but "it's something that is very strongly encouraged."

"It's my belief that for these basic examinations, every single student should write them."

Wider voting rights on BCRIC called unfair

The Social Credit government easily defeated a move by the NDP Tuesday to give each shareholder of the B.C. Resources Investment Corp. a say in the firm's affairs.

The NDP sought to change the bill permitting distribution of five free shares in the corporation to every eligible person in the province so that all shareholders would be permitted to vote at annual meetings.

Under current legislation, voting rights are restricted to those people, estimated at 60,000, who own 100 or more shares in the corporation.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said voting rights were restricted because it would cost the corporation about $12 million a year to give every shareholder voting privileges.

Wolfe said this would be an "unfair burden which would reflect itself on the shareholders down the line."

He said corporation officials calculated that the cost of calling the annual meeting and printing the annual report and proxies would cost about $3 to $5 a shareholder if each of the estimated 2.4 million shareholders was given a vote.

Norman Levi (NDP — Malliardville-Coquitlam) reminded Wolfe that Premier Bill Bennett had sent a letter to nearly every person in the province announcing the share offering, and wondered how much that had cost taxpayers.

Levi said the law creates two classes of people in respect to the corporation: "those who hold free shares who cannot participate and those who can afford to buy shares who can participate."

Charles Barber (NDP — Victoria) suggested the government use the B.C. Government News to announce annual meetings and for reports.

"You've been using it for everything else," he said.

Stu Leggatt (NDP — Coquitlam-Moody) said the placing of assets valued at $300 million into the hands of 60,000 people "confirms the theft from the people of B.C. to the people who still own and control the province."

Leggatt said Bennett had said one of the principal reasons the corporation had been set up was to teach B.C. residents about individual ownership.

"How is that teaching them something about individual ownership? You don't want them to have a chance to vote if you don't want them to show up at annual meetings."

Frank Mitchell (NDP — Esquimalt-Port Renfrew) reminded the legislature that Bennett, while in opposition, had campaigned on the slogan "Not a dime without debate."

He urged the government to give that right to all shareholders in the corporation.

Labor Minister Allan Williams said the amendment does not recognize the facts of corporate life and emphasizes the distinction between the government and the opposition about the rights of citizens.

Wolfe said the largest corporation in Canada probably does not have any more than 25,000 to 30,000 shareholders.

Wait for report on uranium: Skelly

Alberni NDP MLA Bob Skelly called Tuesday for a moratorium on exploration for uranium pending the outcome of an Royal Commission into uranium mining and exportation now under way in B.C.

Skelly said the Atomic Energy Commission of Canada had issued a permit, during the recent provincial election campaign, allowing surface exploration for uranium in the Adams River area of the Shuswap Valley in the interior.

However, Mines Minister Jim Hewitt said a moratorium is not necessary because uranium mining will not be permitted until after the royal commission's recommendations have been studied and the government is satisfied there would be no major environmental problems.

Meanwhile, he said, any drilling for uranium is conducted under close scrutiny by his ministry. Once the tests are completed, the drill holes must be capped with cement and the site cleaned up.

He said ministry staff has found that the drilling has "negligible or no effect" on the environment.

Skelly said the Adams River has one of the most important salmon runs in the province "and there is obviously going to be some effect on fisheries from surface exploration because it does involve diamond drilling, it does involve removing rock and overburden."

Hewitt said the province issues the drilling permits, and none have been issued for this area.

He said the exploration involved is basically using geiger counters, surveying and other surface work.

Health projects get cash

Health Minister Bob McClelland Tuesday announced 56 health-related research projects selected to share $1.1 million in provincial lottery revenues.

He said the projects, selected from 114 applications, bring to 109 the number of projects funded to date. The total amount of lottery money made available to research is over $2.35 million.

The largest grant was $83,800, awarded to Dr. D.R. Ricci of the University of B.C. department of medicine to study the effects of mental stress on blood-flow to the heart and for the purchase of equipment needed for the research.

Mair backs wolf poison

Environment Minister Rafe Mair said Tuesday he will recommend to cabinet that poison be used as a method of controlling wolves and other predators.

Ranchers in the Bonaparte Plateau near Kamloops had been using poison to kill wolves which they said were attacking cattle until Mair imposed a moratorium on the program last December.

Later that month, he said the poisoning would be banned completely because there appeared to be no hard evidence to back up ranchers' fears of heavy livestock losses because of the predators.

However, Mair said Tuesday he has examined a study on predator control and now is convinced that poison should be used in certain limited areas, particularly in Smithers and the Peace River district, to protect ranchers from the heavy livestock losses.

"We were surprised to learn that the poison that was most maligned — 1080 — is perhaps the most humane in the final analysis," he said. "I think many of the people who criticized it before, that is the scientists, are prepared to re-think their criticism of it."

Henry Blazowski of the cattlemen's association said there are up to 6,000 wolves in the province, and the average wolf eats betwen five and six pounds of meat a day which adds up to 30,000 pounds of meat a day.

He said one rancher in the Bonaparte Plateau lost 28 head of cattle last year at a loss of about $14,000.

New alternative school policy

LANGLEY (CP) — Education Minister Pat McGeer has launched a study into how to designate B.C. alternative schools that offer programs with specific philosophies, the Langley school board has announced.

The investigation follows a request by the B.C. Teachers' Federation for a probe into whether fundamental schools here should be designated as alternative schools.

McGeer said in a letter to the federation that examination of the issue on a province-wide basis will provide the framework for a new policy on alternative schools.

A report issued by a federation-sponsored commission said fundamental schools were at the root of deteriorating relations and conflict between the school board and the Langley Teachers' Association.

The commission recommended that the board establish a policy on alternative schools and cease designating them as fundamental schools.

It said the only children allowed to attend the fundamental schools and the only teachers allowed to work there were those subscribing to the Judeo-Christian philosophy.

Parental control was higher at the fundamental schools than at other public schools, the report said, and waiting lists are administered by parents' committees rather than the school board.

Many parents and teachers resented claims by trustees that fundamental schools are superior to other schools, the report said.

Figures asked before merger for TV firms

VANCOUVER (CP) — Western Broadcasting Co. Ltd. and Premier Cablevision Ltd. were told Tuesday they must provide five-year spending plans for themselves and subsidiaries before a federal regulatory agency will consider their bid for a pooling of resources.

The two companies had resisted an earlier reqest from the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission for the information, saying it was confidential.

The companies want to establish a new firm that would hold 55 per cent of Western shares and 50.5 per cent of Premier shares.

A spokesman for Western Broadcasting said later a request had been made of the various firms for the information and but he was unsure whether it could be assembled in time.

Western operates AM and FM radio stations in Vancouver, Calgary, Winnipeg and Hamilton and owns a half-interest in B.C. Television Broadcasting Systems Ltd., which operates CHAN-TV in Vancouver and CHEK-TV in Victoria.

Premier, which is the largest cablevision company in B.C., also operates systems in Oakville, Mississauga and Metropolitan Toronto.

The companies say the establishment of the new firm would mean greater production of television programs and films, increased research and development and more attention to community needs.

But opponents say approval move would jeopardize minority interests and concentrate media ownership. Among the opponents is Torstar Corp., publisher of the Toronto Star, which holds 33 per cent of the shares of Western.

After the application was made, the commission requested the companies to provide their spending figures for the last five years and projected spending for the next five years. The request included Premier and Western's related and subsidiary companies.

ITU votes yes on Pacific Press pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — Hopes brightened Tuesday for a settlement in the 7½-month strike-lockout that has shut down the city's two major daily newspapers after one of six unions involved reversed its stand and voted to accept the latest offer from the company.

Members of the 280-member International Typographical Union (ITU) voted 67-per-cent in favor of accepting the latest offer from Pacific Press, which produces the evening Sun and the morning Province.

Harold Dieno, ITU president and co-chairman of the Joint Council of Newspaper Unions, had threatened to resign if the union rejected the contract.

Union members narrowly rejected the company offer last week, but decided to put it to another vote after minor changes were made in the contract language.

Dieno declined to speculate on the effect his union's acceptance would have on two unions, the printing pressmen's union and the wholesale drivers union, which rejected the offer last week.

Under joint bargaining all six unions in the council must accept the contract before it is formally ratified.

The Vancouver-New Westminster Newspaper Guild, which represents 800 of the company's 1,400 employees, the Graphic Arts Union and the Vancouver Mailers' Union voted to accept the offer. Their acceptance pushed the over-all number of workers in favor of the contract to 68 per cent.

Province publisher Paddy Sherman said in an interview that the latest vote was very encouraging. He said he expects the executive of the four unions who now have voted in favor will be working very hard to find ways to end the dispute.

"Basically what it means is that 90 per cent of our employees have voted to accept our offer."

That proposal provides for a 35-per-cent wage increase over the life of a 40-month contract. Included are fringe benefits totalling 3.5 per cent spread out over the contract's term.

The ITU's vote follows a decision by the joint council to cease publication of the union newspaper, The Express, this Friday. The thrice-weekly broadsheet provided strike funds for members of the six unions.

Publisher Don Brown said the newspaper was intended to last only as long as the Pacific Press dispute.

Despite the apparent optimism, the strike-lockout is far from being settled. The 100-member printing pressmen's union voted 74-per-cent against the contract offer last week and have given no indication they will change their position.

Meanwhile, The Daily News, a 12-page broadsheet newspaper that publisher Peter Lasch plans to produce six days a week, made its debut with 50,000 copies on Vancouver streets Tuesday.

The newspaper has national, international and local news and photographs plus 5½ pages of advertising.

The Courier, currently a twice-weekly publication, has announced it plans to publish five days a week beginning July 4.

Customs man cleared of meat theft charge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Charges of theft, forgery and breach of trust against a Canada Customs superintendent have been thrown out of court.

Five charges against Walter Coleman, a 27-year veteran of the customs service, were laid last summer after National Harbors Board police discovered customs officers and waterfront workers were purchasing imported meat for less than one cent a pound.

County court Judge J. J. Anderson said in dismissing the charges Tuesday that there was no evidence Coleman owned the more than 200 pounds of New Zealand beef and lamb that were seized.

The judge said Coleman and others made no attempt to conceal or hide their actions and notification that the meat had been abandoned could have led to the understanding that it was free, provided all customs duties and taxes were paid.

The meat has been held by the National Harbors Board for the last ten months, and the board now will have to get rid of it.

'Roughhouse' boxing ban

KELOWNA (CP) — Unsanctioned fights or "roughhouse boxing matches" will not be allowed in any city facilities, city council decided Monday.

The decision was prompted by applications to use the city arena for the boxing matches in which participants are recruited from the audience.

This type of fight card, where the pugilists have ranged from burly bikers to longshoremen, bouncers and loggers, have been held recently in Victoria, Vancouver and Kamloops. Conventional boxing rules do not have to be followed.

Henry Markgraf, Kelowna director of civic properties, said a match recently held in Vancouver got out of hand and required police action.

New airline baggage system

VANCOUVER (CP) — CP Air announced Tuesday it will begin construction of a $1 million baggage system at Vancouver International Airport this summer.

The new facility is part of a $2.4-million expansion and modernization plan for CP ground services at Canadian airports.

Other projects include a new cargo office building at Whitehorse airport, a new maintenance building at Grande Prairie, Alta., improved cargo facilities at Toronto and a lounge at Calgary.

Endako talks resume

FRASER LAKE (CP) — Talks have resumed between Placer Development Ltd. and the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers in an attempt to end a four-month strike at the Endako molybdenum mine near here.

The talks, the first in the bitter, violence-plagued dispute in nearly two months, began Monday in this central British Columbia community under Hugh Ladner, appointed industrial inquiry commissioner last week by Labor Minister Allan Williams.

The company has continued production during the strike, which has been marked by gun shots and rocks thrown at trucks passing through a union picket line, threats against management employees and numerous incidents of vandalism against company property.

Drug abuse fighter charged with LSD

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A member of the Parents Alert Society, a group dealing with drug abuse, was judged Monday to be in possession of 134 doses of the hallucenogenic drug Lysergic Acid Diethylamide (LSD).

Arthur Frank Smitheram, 30, of Kamloops, had pleaded not guilty in provincial court to possession of a restricted drug for the purpose of trafficking.

Judge Terry Shupe found Smitheram possessed the drug but now must decide whether it was in his possession for the purpose of trafficking. His judgment is expected Thursday.

Smitheram testified he was heavily involved in using and selling LSD 10 years ago but has since stopped.

Dustbowl party in posh digs

By PAUL WHITELAW
FP News Service

MONT STE-MARIE, Que. — It was an ironic setting for a political movement which traces its roots to the dustbowl poverty of the Canadian prairies during the 1930s depression.

But a posh Gatineau Hills resort where NDP MPs wound up their first post-election caucus Tuesday afternoon was yet another sign of the party's arrival in the ideological mainstream of Canadian politics.

If the L'Auberge Ste-Marie and its golf course and tennis courts and gourmet restaurant seemed a more likely setting for a seminar of corporate fat cats than firebrand socialists, no one in the image conscious NDP was making apologies.

As communications guru Marshall McLuhan would put it, the medium — or in this case, the location about 80 kilometres north of Ottawa — was part of the party's message.

Few NDPers would like to think of themselves as being in the middle of the ideological road, but there wouldn't be a lot of disagreement that the road they're travelling veers only slightly to the left.

The locale, however, wasn't the only irony of the two-day session held to plot strategy for the next session of Parliament.

When NDP leader Ed Broadbent came out swinging at a wind-up news conference, he aimed some of his hardest punches not at Prime Minister Joe Clark but Liberal leader Pierre Trudeau.

Broadbent charged that the Liberals have abdicated their role as the official Opposition party, saying: "They've lost the government but they haven't found a new role for themselves."

He referred to the Liberals' first post-election caucus last week after which Opposition House Leader Allan MacEachen said: "We intend to give the new government a fair and reasonable chance to govern the country."

Broadbent also told reporters that Clark "has to be given a chance to show what he can do."

But he added: "Our caucus members recognize their obligation to begin now our critical opposition function . . . We on our side have to perform our task, that of providing constrictive criticism, and it is that that the Liberals have said they're not going to do."

Broadbent stressed the NDP's commitment to keep pressure on Clark to assure that medicare is preserved as a universal "right of all Canadians" and is not available "only to the wealthy."

He described cutbacks in medicare services by some provinces and the introduction of deterrent fees as a "deepening crisis."

The NDP, as it maintained during the election campaign, wants the government to bring back legislation abolished two years ago that requires provinces to match federal medicare funds on a dollar-for-dollar basis.

He was asked whether he had failed to mention the NDP's call for a Fair Prices Commission with power to roll back or freeze prices because if was felt such a proposal had little chance of being passed by Parliament?

"I just didn't want to bore you with a repetition (of party policy)," Broadbent responded. "It would seem to Mr. Clark and Mr. Trudeau that there is nothing you can do about prices. It doesn't seem (that way) to us at all."

Broadbent added he had received an indication from the Prime Minister that he "might act" to bring back subsidies for bread and milk cut by the Liberals.

Lineup of NDP critics

MONT STE. MARIE, Que. (CP) — New Democratic MPs were given assignments as critics of government departments Tuesday.

NDP Leader Ed Broadbent said he will speak for the party on federal-provincial relations and constitutional reform, while 25 NDP MPs square off against the 29 ministers in Prime Minister Clark's minority Conservative government.

—Lawyer Bob Rae of Broadview-Greenwood in Toronto, a Rhodes Scholar, finance;

—Pauline Jewett, one-time Liberal MP, elected on May 22 for the NDP in New Westminster-Coquitlam, external affairs;

—Cyril Symes, MP for Sault Ste. Marie in Ontario since 1972, energy;

—Fonse Faour of Newfoundland's Humber-Port au Port-St. Barbe, lawyer and former CBC announcer, justice;

Chiropractor curb?

OTTAWA (UPC) — The Consumers Association of Canada has called into question the diagnostic competence of chiropractors who administer X-rays to patients and has urged that Ontario chiropractors be banned from using the equipment.

"The public has no guarantee as to the diagnostic competence of the chiropractors' use of X-rays. Chiropractors have no recognized educational relationship to university and hospital radiology programs," the CAC said Tuesday in a letter to members of the Ontario legislature.

The association said more than $10 million has been paid to chiropractors over the last five years through the Ontario Health Insurance Plan. It said the Ontario government should justify that expense to the public.

The group said it could back up its recommendation with positions taken by scientific organizations including the Radiation Protection Bureau, the Canadian Association of Radiologists and the Pediatric Hospital Study Group.

"Based on the advice of these authorities, we feel that patients would be justified in refusing to submit to chiropractic X-ray examination. Such a refusal would be especially warranted in the case of women and children."

Vancouver obstetrician to head CMA

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. William D.S. Thomas, 45, a Vancouver obstetrician, was chosen president-elect of the Canadian Medical Association on Tuesday, defeating Dr. W.J. Jory, also of Vancouver.

12 run for mayor

WINNIPEG (CP) — Voters in Winnipeg will pick a new mayor today from 12 candidates bidding for the position.

The winner will serve out the 17 months that remain of the three-year term of Robert Steen who died last month of cancer.

The top contenders for the job are deputy mayor Bill Norrie and Joe Zuken, two of five city councillors in the mayoralty race.

Other city councillors in the race are Don Gerrie, Phil Rizzuto and Alf Skowron. Two former city councillors, Harry Lazarenko and Ray Brunka, also are candidates.

By LEO QUIGLEY
United Press Canada

Nowhere is the effect of price controls more evident than in western Canada where the Crow's Nest freight rate has held the cost of moving grain at levels that were minimal even at the turn of the century.

Western farm groups fought for the low shipping rates as a concession by the railways to the Canadian prairies, far from tidewater and without a Mississippi River.

There remain several powerful farm lobbies in western Canada that will defend the Crow Rate, and its accompanying mythology, to the death.

But the inevitable result of the Crow Rate, as with any fixed price, has been the gradual deterioration of the service whose price is fixed — in this case the western Canada rail system.

The reluctance of the railways to upgrade their system and equipment, the resulting inability to deliver grain, and the lost sales and high demurrage charges on ships sitting idle at Vancouver have convinced most western farmers that changes are overdue.

However, the mechanics involved in changing the Crow Rate are sensitive — epecially for a federal government with its political support in the west — and they are complex enough to involve a myriad of high-priced consultants to draft proposals.

Three confidential reports outlined in a copyright story in Report on Farming give some insight into how the statutory rate might be changed, and what the ramifications might be to Canadian taxpayers.

One report, a proposal for change hammered out by an ad hoc committee involving commodity groups, cattle organizations, elevator companies and railway executives calls on the federal government to pay a direct annual subsidy to prairie grain producers.

In exchange, farmers would pay a higher "compensatory" rate for grain shipment by rail. The proposal recommends that the subsidy be based on the volume of the six statutory gains sold to grain processing elevators and feedlots, feedmills and flour mills.

For 1979 the total subsidy would amount to about $350 million.

The result would be to move the grain transportation costs from railway books to the public treasury and the end result, hopefully, would be an incentive for the two major railways to upgrade their part of the grain transportation system.

Two other studies — one by the Alberta government and the other by the federal agriculture department — show that the subsidy and an increase in the freight rate for grain would have far-reaching, beneficial effects for western Canada.

Based on traditional grain production patterns in the three prairie provinces, Saskatchewan farmers would receive about $183 million of the benefits from the Crow rate, Alberta farmers would get about $109 million and Manitoba farmers $56 million.

The expected efficiencies and improved grain exports would mean another $177 million within 10 years.

More important, perhaps, those secondary industries that have been placed at a competitive disadvantage for four generations because of the artificially low rate would receive a shot in the arm.

The Alberta report estimates an improved competitive enviroment would be worth nearly $100 million to western Canada's livestock industry and $32 million to meat processing and oilseed crushing industries.

The federal government report — entitled The Crow: Christmas Turkey or Prairie Vulture? — is even more optimistic. Its estimates of the benefits of such a policy change are more than double those of the Alberta study.

The real conclusion of these studies seems to be that while the Crow Rate benefits prairie grain producers to the tune of about $250 million a year, it also costs prairie agriculture between $130 million and $350 million in lost livestock production and secondary processing.

Politically, the Agriculture Canada study says the decision to shift grain transportation costs from the railways to the public purse is likely to involve a national debate "between the taxpayers and the grain producers" before the mechanics are resolved.

With Canadian grain exports falling further behind almost daily, the multi-million dollar losses in export sales and the prospect of $6-$8 wheat on the horizon which would be missed because the Canadian system can't deliver, the pressure on Ottawa to adjust this piece of formidable legislation is likely to become intense this fall and winter.

However, the Crow Rate cannot be adjusted without stepping on the toes of one or more powerful farm lobbies — or on the big toe of the Canadian taxpayer. The screams may be deafening.

The future of Joe Clark's neophyte government may be determined by this economic question more than any other single issue in Canadian politics — including Rene Levesque's engrossing display of muscle flexing.

Concert rocking boat

ATHABASCA (CP) — Residents of the Athabasca area of northern Alberta are circulating a petition in hopes of keeping a rock concert from going ahead on the July 1 weekend.

The County of Athabasca lost a formal battle when the Alberta Supreme Court refused to issue an injunction to halt the event.

Mr. Justice J. C. Cavanagh ruled the county could not use a zoning bylaw to regulate entertainment. The county contended the land on which the concert is to be held is zoned for agricultural use.

Athabasca residents are worried about the effects 20,000 rock fans might have on the area.

Bob MacGregor, one of the petition's organizers, said Saturday the petition had collected 300 signatures.

Steve Bemount, county secretary-treasuer, said a similar concert held recently near Bentley in central Alberta resulted in extensive damage to property.

But concert producer Danny Makarus said he expects no trouble at the Athabasca concert, called the Triple Tripper rock festival.

Makarus said 200 acres will be set aside for parking and 100 acres for camping, while the concert will be held on 60 acres of land.

Pelican Island to be restored

BROOKS, Alta. (CP) — A wisp of an island in Lake Newell near this southern Alberta community is the scene of a $100,000 project to prevent the province's largest cormorant colony from going under water.

The water level of Lake Newell has risen 1½ metres in the last two years after the local irrigation district decided that additional water was needed for irrigation purposes.

Because the lake was never filled to its licensed level after its construction between 1910 and 1914, the irrigation district did not need provincial approval to add more water.

But the rising level is threatening the existence of Pelican Island.

"At the present rate of erosion, Pelican Island will cease to exist in a few years," warned a study conducted last year by the engineering consulting firm of Underwood and McLellan Ltd.

More than 600 breeding pairs of cormorants are nesting on Pelican Island, says Steve Brechtel of University of Alberta, who is conducting a study of the fish-eating birds in southern Alberta.

Pelican Island is the home of the largest and oldest colony of cormorants in the province, Brechtel says, adding that the island is also the parent colony for a number of cormorant nesting areas in other parts of southern Alberta.

Designated by the province as a prohibited access area in 1977, no one is allowed within a kilometre of Pelican Island between April 15 and Sept. 15 when the large black birds are nesting.

The project to save the island from being submerged is being undertaken in two phases by the Alberta wildlife habitat branch.

The first phase, completed last winter, involved physical improvements in the form of sloping a four-metre vertical shoreline. Broken rock was hauled across the ice to the island to help prevent waves from washing it away.

The second phase involves building a breakwater with 10,000 old car tires — donated by the City of Calgary — to minimize wave action against the island's shores. Half of the breakwater has been completed, and the other 5,000 tires are still being collected at the Calgary sanitation site.

Mayor's widow strapped for cash

WINNIPEG (UPC) — The funeral is over, the bills are beginning to come in and the widow of Winnipeg's late mayor Bob Steen now faces the lonely task of making ends meet in the face of virtual destitution.

Irene Steen said in a recent interview that her husband's $139,000 estate is wiped out by debts and she may be forced to sell her home to support herself, her 13-year-old son Graham and 9-year-old son Grant.

An immediate expense is an estimated $3,000 for the elaborate funeral following Steen's death on May 10 at age 45 after a two-month battle with liver cancer.

"I am adapting from marriage to the loneliness and single-mindedness of making decisions on my own," she said.

"People assume that Robert was a fatcat lawyer and politician with a big pension," said Mrs. Steen. "That's not true. There is a very real need for a trust fund. One has ... de but one wants to give things to their children.

"If the fund isn't established now, it never will be. After the new mayor is elected next week we will have become has-beens."

Steen had been ineligible for large amounts of life insurance because he had had a cancerous kidney removed 10 years ago.

Ironically, Steen, whose only source of income had been the $37,000 mayor's stipend, had no pension, in part because as a councillor he had put forward a motion to stop pension benefits for mayors and council members.

Mrs. Steen said an education fund started by concerned friends has already raised more than $10,000 but accepting it makes her feel "like a beggar." A teacher, she has sought work but without luck.

"I want to keep my house and a city trust fund would help me do this," she said. "But I'm not holding my breath."

Natives 'time bombs of despair'

OTTAWA (CP) — Many natives are time bombs ready to explode when feelings of violence, frustration, rage and despair are released by alcohol, an international symposium on suicide was told Tuesday.

Dr. Diane Syer of Toronto said alcoholism, a common theme in many violent Indian deaths, is often an escape for natives living within a deprived community with a shattered culture.

The direction of the release was often inwards and resulted in suicide, listed in a 1977 study by Ms. Dyer as 41 per 100,000 natives.

The figure was considered "very conservative by authorities spoken to at the department of Indian and northern affairs."

The rate for the general population, based on 1976 Statistics Canada data, was 13 per 100,000 she said.

The three-day conference, sponsored jointly by the Canadian Mental Health Association and the International Association for Suicide Prevention (Canada) Inc., ended Tuesday.

Ms. Dyer said a composite picture of a native suicide victim would closely outline the profiles of seven young Ontario Indian men who died within a one-year period from December, 1974, to November, 1975.

The suicide epidemic at the 3,000-member Wikwemikong reserve on Manitoulin Island was the subject of a study by Dr. Jack Ward of Sudbury, who submitted a psychiatric report to the coroner's jury investigating the violent deaths.

Ward noted that Indians, once members of proud nations, grew up seeing themselves portrayed as "screaming, blood-thirsty murderers or as the grunting, not-very-bright but ever- faithful companion of the Lone Ranger."

Their low self-esteem, combined with social isolation, family dependence, an inclination to internalize pain, anger and worry, made Indians extremely vulnerable, Ward said.

"For some, when the pain reached an unendurable level, there was a sudden and violent release of these unresolved feelings," Ward said.

In other cases, alcohol would act to reduce inhibitions such that "the feelings of violence, frustration, rage and despair normally under control, became released."

Ms. Dyer said: "The picture which emerges is analagous to a ticking bomb — a socially isolated, dependent person with very low self-esteem, who is eventually swept away in a tide of emotions he can no longer control."

Ms. Dyer added that in her experience, those who fought the overwhelming odds and overcame the obstacles became exceptionally strong and forthright people.

But those odds have been mounting since the arrival of white settlers several hundred years ago.

Newfoundland suicide rate below average

OTTAWA (CP) — Newfoundland has the lowest rate of suicide in the country which two experts say could change if the province sees uncontrolled urban growth.

Dr. Ashok Malla, a psychiatrist with the Waterford Hospital in St. John's, Nfld., told an international conference on suicide that because of the province's social and cultural uniqueness, even the pattern of Newfoundland's suicide rate is different.

Malla and Dr. Julius Hoenig, chairman in psychiatry at Memorial University in St. John's, compared the province's suicide rates with the national rates dating back to 1950 and found Newfoundland has not caught up with national levels.

Their study showed the province's suicide rate remained at a low average of 3.5 per 100,000 population between 1964 and 1973. The national rate during that period rose to 10.8 from 7.8 per 100,000 average.

Teachers rapped over book ban

OTTAWA (CP) — Toronto writer June Callwood says teachers are creating a dangerous situation by refusing to oppose the banning of controversial books by Canadian schools.

She told about 1,000 delegates at a Canadian Library Association conference Tuesday that "teachers are afraid of losing their jobs and they're not about to risk them for the sake of a book."

"They are choosing to leave certain books off their reading lists . . . books that may have been put on the approved list, but which could cause potential problems," she said.

Miss Callwood, president of the Writers Union of Canada and a campaigner for human rights, told the librarians they have been less vulnerable to public criticism, but should be prepared to defend the books when they do come under pressure.

She said Canadian literature has only come into its own during the last 10 years — "there is no other literature like it and it needs to be protected."

A live mower on loose

TORONTO (CP) — A four-legged lawnmower has proved to be too much for one Toronto family.

Now the Toronto Humane Society is looking for the owner of a goat found wandering on a downtown street during the weekend.

"One family took him in, but he ate all the grass in their backyard," said society official Janet Pinney. "So they called us."

Union drive in supermarts

TORONTO (CP) — A drive to organize non-union workers in supermarkets will be one result of a recent merger that created Canada's fifth-largest union, spokesmen for the union say.

The United Food and Commercial Union, with 120,000 members in Canada, was formed by the merger of the Retail Clerks International Union and the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen, the latter operating in this country as the Canadian Food and Allied Workers.

With 1.2 million members in North America, the new union is surpassed in size only by the International Brotherhood of Teamsters and the United Auto Workers.

Headed by Clifford Evans, the Retail Clerks had about 55,000 members in Canada and the Allied Workers about 65,000.

The two original unions bargained for workers in about six per cent of Canada's supermarkets and spokesmen say the merger will result in a renewed organizational drive.

Wholesale trade up 12.6%

OTTAWA (CP) — Wholesale merchants reported a 12.6 per cent increase in April sales this year compared with the same month last year.

Figures released by Statistics Canada Tuesday showed wholesale sales of $5.6 billion compared with $4.9 billion in April 1978.

The federal agency also reported a 24.8-per-cent increase in the amount of unsold wholesale stocks on hand.

Mortgage rate hike won't be probed

By VICTOR MACKIE
FP Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — The National Commission on Inflation has decided that the recent increase in mortgage interest rates by several financial institutions do not warrant investigation at this time.

However the commission will continue to monitor changes in both the rate and the spread, Harold A. Renouf, chairman of the commission has informed Herb Gray, Liberal member of Parliament for Windsor West. The MP released the exchange of letters Tuesday.

He wrote to the chairman at the end of May pointing out that two banks and a trust company had raised key mortgage rates. They were the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, the Bank of Montreal and Canada Trustco Mortgage Company.

Gray asked the commission to investigate the increases to see if they are in fact justified because of increased costs or whether they were being carried out in anticipation of the implementation of the Conservative government's promised mortgage interest tax reduction program. He said if the latter was the case then many homeowners would have a smaller benefit than they anticipated from the program.

The MP said an investigation was required because the increases could be the forerunners of similar increases by all financial institutions.

Renouf replied that the Gray request was presented to the regular commission meeting this month.

"The commission decided that the movement of the interest rate by ¼ per cent did not warrant investigation at this time."

Hostage-taker yields

CHICOUTIMI, Que. (CP) — A 22-year-old prisoner gave himself up to police early today after holding two guards hostage at knifepoint for about four hours in this city's provincial jail, Quebec provincial police said.

The prisoner, who had been demanding drugs and beer for the release of the hostages, was taken to a nearby psychiatric institute for observation, a provincial police spokesman said.

Sgt. Yvon Bergeron declined to comment on rumors that one of the guards was slightly injured during the hostage-taking incident.

The prisoner, whose name was not disclosed, released the guards after negotiating for about three hours with police. It was not known whether police granted any of his demands.

Affluent Saudis move in

AYLMER, Que. (CP) — It seems that Saudi Arabian diplomats are more affluent than the Zambian delegation.

The Saudis have rented the stately Chateau Valency mansion here for their ambassador's residence, a posh property vacated by the Zambians after its upkeep as an embassy became too expensive.

The Teamsters' union, which purchased the property last year, has rented it to the embassy until 1982.

Several other diplomats have chosen to live in this area just north of Ottawa.

Bennett, PM air positions

OTTAWA (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett dined Tuesday with Prime Minister Clark at his 24 Sussex Drive official residence as a result of Bennett requesting an early meeting.

Bennett said afterward that he and Clark had a "good discussion" that included energy, offshore resources, B.C. port development, Clark's coming Japan trip and Petro-Canada, the government-owned oil corporation.

Bennett, who leads B.C.'s Social Credit goverment, said he had not expected any commitments from Clark, but that they did agree not to allow disagreements between the federal government and the province to fester but to meet quickly to sort them out.

In a telegram to Clark the day after the May 22 federal election Bennett had said there were a number of federal-provincial agreements he wanted to review.

He was the second premier to dine at the official prime minister's residence since the Clarks took possession of it. Ontario Premier Bill Davis was there last week — the day before they actually moved in.

Water bombers failed to quell raging Cariboo school fire.

$2.5M school gutted

QUESNEL (CP) — Investigators were beginning to sift through rubble Tuesday to determine the cause of a $2.5 million fire at the Cariboo Junior Secondary School in this Interior community.

Water bombers from the British Columbia Forest Service were called in to help 60 firemen fight the fire after it broke through the roof of the school.

The main section of the school and a new addition built last year were destroyed three hours after the fire was reported at 8:45 a.m. Only two portable units were saved.

Investigators said they believe the fire started in the school's stage area and spread to the upper floors, but do not know how it started.

Most of the 500 students were either outside the school or in the hallways going to classes when the alarm rang and were safely evacuated to a nearby elementary school without injuries.

Three firemen were treated for cuts and bruises.

Ray Beaulieu, deputy chief of the 42-member volunteer fire department here, said the fire's central location in the school made fire-fighting difficult.

He also said firemen were hampered by low water pressure and "if the wind had come up when the fire peaked, we would have had a real problem."

Awards presented city's top students

Awards ceremonies were held recently at several schools in Greater Victoria School District.

At Mount Douglas high school several scholarships were presented to outstanding students.

Helen Campbell and Maureen Songhurst received the Edwards scholarship cup and Kerry Randle was presented with the Parham-Melvile scholarship cup.

Outstanding male athletes honored were: Russ Mosher, Grade 12; Terry Bateman and Mark Crisp, Grade 11.

Chosen outstanding female athletes: Judy Tobacco, Grade 12, and Kelly Rimmer, Grade 11.

The Art Cornish sportsmanship award was presented to Dave Williams and the Allan MacDonald athletic award was given to Janine Prince.

Other award and trophy winners were: Heather Walker, Shelly Shenton, Linda Gait, Wendy Woychuk, Laura Lyn Grooms.

During a ceremony at Lambrick Park high school Grade 12 student Mark Havlasek was presented with the Donald Munro book prize, Lampac academic award, principal's academic achievement award and the Grade 12 history award.

Top academic awards were given to Tammy Whyte, Grade 8; Karen Choo, Grade 9; Patti Lund and Alex Campbell, Grade 10; and Hugh Owen, Grade 11.

Service awards went to Kent Lindahl, Heather Tubman and Debbie Johns.

Bursaries and other wards were presented to Janye Fumerton, Marion Mah, Jeff Thom, Peter Chappell and Yvonne Kopan.

At Oak Bay senior high school, 65 students were presented with honor awards for outstanding achievement and there were 21 straight A students, the largest number of honor award winners in the history of the school.

The Kiwanis citizenship cup for school and community service was presented jointly to Lorraine Osselton and Ruth Schwantje.

The Reach for the Top trophy for the B.C. championships was presented to Oak Bay team Alan Horgan, Michael Batten, Dorothy Field and Peter Barlow.

The John Walker award for creative writing was presented to Lachlan Murray.

The Brentwood speaking cup was awarded to Bruce Hill.

Winners of service and citizenship trophies were: Willy Fry, Aubrey humanitarian award; Laurel Ormiston, Willway service award; Jocelyn Laidlaw and Cheryl Hyde, laides auxiliary to Langford Fire Department award; Scott McKinnon, South Vancouver Island Lions award; and Shelagh Stiven, I.O.D.E., Royal Bride Chapter award.

Scholarships and bursaries totaling $4,000 were awarded to 18 students.

Tax deduction bill 'hazard'

The bill making campaign contributions tax deductible puts a dangerous amount of power into the hands of the government of the day, the NDP charged Tuesday.

He said the section allows the cabinet of whichever party is in power to collect and review the records of any individual who filed a deduction claim on their income tax.

Hanson claimed the power gives an advantage to the government of the day and poses a hazard to the democratic process.

"The section must be removed and confidentiallity must be guaranteed," he urged.

Even better, Hanson said, would be full public disclosure of all contributions over $100 as is the case federally.

Civil servants would be especially intimidated Hanson suggested, if they felt records of their campaign contributions could fall into the hands of their employers.

Finance Minister Evan Wolfe said the opposition fears are unfounded.

Such a move as they outlined would be illegal under the secrecy of tax information laws.

B.C. followed tax deduction systems set up by the governments of Alberta and Ontario, Wolfe said.

The bill was passed after several hours of debate.

Beef can use your tender, loving care

Turn some of the less costly — and that means tougher — cuts of beef into delicious specialties. Cooks throughout the country are doing just that using marinades.

A good marinade does a magical job of tenderizing the less expensive blade, cross rib or round steak. After soaking in a marinade overnight, these steaks broil or barbecue to perfection.

For a delightful change cut the steaks into cubes for Kebobs. Cook just as you would a steak and serve on a bed of rice with vegetables.

Cubes on a stick seem to go farther. Perhaps it's because we don't expect as large a serving as we do when steak is served.

Beef shortribs are reasonably priced compared to choice cuts. They barbecue beautifully after they've soaked in a marinade.

BARBECUED BLADE STEAK

Juice of 1 lemon.
1 clove garlic, crushed.
1 teaspoon freshly ground pepper.
½ teaspoon of marjoram.
Pinch of salt.
1 blade steak, 2 pounds.

Mix oil, lemon juice, garlic, pepper, marjoram and salt. Place steak in a glass dish or double plastic bag. Pour lemon juice mixture over steak, making sure it is evenly coated.

Let stand 2 hours in a cool place or refrigerate overnight. Remove steak from marinade; dry on paper towels.

Barbecue over medium heat, 4 to 5 minutes to a side, until steak is nicely browned on the outside and juicy red in the middle, or barbecue to the desired degree of doneness.

Season to taste with additional salt and pepper, if desired. Remove to a hot platter to carve.

SUMMER SHORTRIBS

5 pounds beef short ribs.
Prepared mustard.
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped.
1 teaspoon rosemary or ¼ cup finely chopped fresh rosemary.
2 bay leaves.
¼ cup chopped parsley.
1 cup red table wine.
½ cup water.
½ cup vegetable oil.
¼ cup soy sauce.

Brush shortribs with mustard. Sprinkle with garlic. Place in a shallow dish or double plastic bag. Add bay leaves. Mix parsley, wine, water, oil and soy sauce; pour over short ribs. Marinate, turning occasionally, if in dish, for 24 hours. Remove shortribs from marinade; dry on paper towels.

Barbecue, slowly, over medium heat, 10 to 15 minutes each side, until well-browned and crisp on the outside. Turn 2 to 3 times for even cooking.

(Makes four to six servings.)

The following marinades are perfect for less-tender cuts:

ORIENTAL MARINADE

½ cup soy sauce.
1 tablespoon lemon juice.
2 cloves garlic, finely chopped.
1 teaspoon freshly ground ginger.
1 teaspoon chili powder.

Combine sherry, soy sauce, lemon juice, garlic, ginger and chili powder. (Soak blade, flank, round steak or beef cubes in this marinade for at least 3 hours, preferably in the refrigerator overnight, before barbecuing.)

(Makes 1¼ cups.)

BEER MARINADE

1½ cup beer.
½ cup vegetable oil.
2 tablespoons soy sauce.
1 tablespoon lemon juice.
1 tablespoon sugar.
1 teaspoon dry mustard.
½ teaspoon salt.
1 clove garlic, finely chopped.

Combine beer and oil; stir in soy sauce, lemon juice, sugar, mustard, salt and garlic. Great for beef, especially less tender cuts.

Marinate meat for at least 2 hours or preferably in the refrigerator overnight to reap the benefits of the marinade.

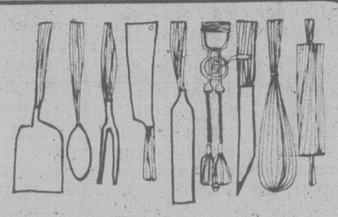
FOOD & nutrition



Like cherry pie?

This recipe for cherry pie can hardly fail:

1 9-inch unbaked pastry shell
1 15-ounce package frozen, unsweetened cherries, thawed
2 tablespoons cornstarch
⅔ cup white sugar
¼ cup brown sugar
⅓ cup flour
2 tablespoons butter
whipped cream

Drain cherries and mix together the juice, cornstarch and white sugar in a saucepan. Cook until thick and clear.

Stir in cherries and add 2 drops red food colouring. Stir and pour into the pie shell. Rub brown sugar, flour and butter together, sprinkle over the top.

Bake in 425° F. oven for 25 minutes and then reduce temperature to 350° F. and continue baking for 25 minutes longer. Cool and top with whipped cream.

Ham quickies

Cut ½ pound processed sharp cheese into cubes; slice 4 green onions and chop 2 hard-cooked eggs. Combine them with ½ cup tomato paste blended with 2 tablespoons of mayonnaise. Cut ¼ pound of sliced smoked ham into strips and divide between 8 hot dog buns. Spread each with cheese mixture.

Wrap each bun in foil and place in refrigerator until ready to heat.

Bake for 15 minutes or until cheese is melted and sandwiches are ready to eat.

TORONTO (CP) — Cigarette?

The society has produced a $100,000 teaching-learning kit for grades 7 and 8.

The kit is geared to evoke negative responses to smoking in the minds of that age group.

Diet for a longer life disputed by doctors

By MARIAN BURROS
The Washington Post

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — At his Longevity Center on the boardwalk here, Nathan Pritikin is taking on heart and artery disease, diabetes, hypertension, arthritis — and most of the medical profession.

Just one year ago, Pritikin moved his centre into the 125-room hotel formerly owned by Synanon. He brought in a staff of physicians, exercise equipment, sophisticated monitors, a recipe file containing almost nothing but vegetarian dishes, and a highly controversial program for drastically overhauling the lifestyles of very sick people.

Some of the patients can barely walk a few hundred feet when they arrive. They pay $4,000 for 26 days in the Pritikin program, which is based on the belief that diet and exercise not only can reverse the course of many degenerative diseases by cleaning the fat and cholesterol out of the arteries, but prevent disease as well.

The nutritionist has described the plan in his very popular book The Pritikin Program for Diet & Exercise written with Patrick McGrady Jr. (Grosset & Dunlap, $12.95) in which an additional 20 or so diseases, including obesity and cancer, are listed as possible candidates for reversal.

The problem is that Pritikin's views are not accepted by many doctors — largely because conclusive scientific proof of the effects has never been conducted. Two years ago, when the Longevity Center was still located in a motel on the beach in Santa Barbara, the slim founder, whom most people take for 10 year younger than his 63 years, was not so critical of traditional medical practice, in particular the National Heart Lung Blood Institute (NHLBI).

At that time Pritikin still entertained the idea that the Heart Institute's director, Dr. Robert Levy, could be won over to his theories and would fund research to prove them scientifically. Today, Pritikin is openly hostile:

"Levy is our enemy," says the ordinarily mild-mannered man who was once a candidate for a heart attack. So Pritikin will undertake to fund the research himself. He says it will cost him $1 million to compare the results of his diet with those of the American Heart Association diet soon to be tried on 1,000 heart patients.

Pritikin's diet permits only 5 to 10 per cent of the total calorie intake from fat, 10 to 15 per cent from protein and 80 per cent from complex carbohydrates. The Heart Association diet allows 30 per cent fat. The traditional American diet is more than 45 per cent fat.

Dr. Levy contends that even though Pritikin's diet "could produce changes, the bottom line is there is no follow-up." As head of a government agency that controls millions of dollars a year in research funds, Levy says: "We can't invest in this unless we know we'll get enough compliance and follow-through. One of the biggest problems is dropout. (Pritikin hasn't) demonstrated research and longevity."

Pritikin's diet permits only minute amounts of fat and salt. Sweeteners and beverages containing caffeine or alcohol are forbidden. Only 1½ pounds of lean meat per week are allowed on the maintenance diet; far less at the center. A vigorous exercise program is tailored to the physical ability of the patient.

Most of them are suffering from advanced stages of cardiovascular disease; often they are candidates for coronary bypass surgery.

In the preface to his book, which is now on every major best-seller list, Pritikin admits: "This is not an easy diet. It requires a reversal of life-long bad habits and nutritional fallacies." On the other hand, he says: "The diet revives old food friends, unjustly scorned by fad diets: breads, cereals, pastas, fruits, vegetables, soups, rice, potatoes . . . With some ingenuity you can produce gourmet delights in every meal category."

To stick with it, especially outside the home, requires a strong commitment because most restaurant, airplane and dinner party food is forbidden. How many people, not faced with imminent death or disability, are likely to give up soft drinks, steaks, butter, cookies and cakes because it might lengthen their lives?

Pritikin says there are already people coming to the centre for prevention rather than cure. "No one is immune to damage from high fat and cholesterol," he says. While he acknowledges that there are genetic differences which make some more suceptible to heart disease than others, "You don't find anyone anymore in this country that is free of artery closure at 20 years old. There are no exceptions."

Librarians to pack clout?

TORONTO (CP) — An increase in the use of computers has raised the librarian's status to a potentially powerful role in society, says the dean of the University of Toronto's library science school.

"There could be a very real danger to individual privacy," said Katherine Packer. "I am most afraid of what is going to happen when the librarian is used as an intermediary."

"The librarian is now faced with ethical questions. For example, with respect to circulation, we would expect that the librarian would refuse to give information about what books a certain person reads.

Dental care starts early

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Good dental care should start in infancy, says a publication of the National Institute of Dental Research. Good Teeth for You and Baby recommends cleaning the first tooth when it appears, wiping it with a clean wash cloth or gauze pad to prevent decay and gum disease. As more teeth emerge, they should be brushed gently and daily with a soft brush, the publication says. It recommends starting children off with their own soft brush and fluoride toothpaste when they are about 2½ years old and all their baby teeth are in.

Hilda Beastall

Most gardeners who grow their vegetables, or most of them, either at home or on a rented allotment, like to taste the first picking in the raw. It may be carrots or green peas, or it may be green beans of the dwarf bush kinds now or quite soon.

Eating vegetables raw serves a useful purpose other than getting the well-known extra dietary values. Taste, texture and even the fresh odor remains in the memory as a guide to the amount of cooking required.

Italian and French preparation and cooking of fresh vegetables has been much written about. And more recently the Chinese way became almost a way of life in many Victoria homes.

The chief aim when cooking is to preserve the flavor and texture and to a great extent the color. This suggests a minimum of water and a minimum of cooking time. Or a light oil may be used with equally good effect. When cooking liquid, now rich in either water soluble or fat soluble nutrients, is used either to make a sauce for the vegetable or in another cooked dish next day, there is really very little nutrient loss between the garden patch and the serving on the plate.

First step in preparing green beans for perfect cooking is to pick them when young. Pick all of one size at one time. They will then cook in the same short period. A picking in two days time may be taken of a larger size so that none is allowed to become even near maturity so early in the season. Bean plants continue growing, flowering, and setting pods much longer when pods are never allowed to reach maturity. The bean should be barely seen when pods are cut for cooking — just a tiny embryo.

Soy beans and lima beans can be picked in the young stage for cooking briefly the same as the bush beans. Bush beans are sometimes called French beans, or simply dwarf beans, quite different from the climbing bean types and the Broad bean.

To Cook Young Green Beans:

Replace lid, adjust heat to bring back to boiling; without lifting lid, reduce heat to active boiling for seven minutes before testing for doneness. Take a few beans on fork to cool. They should still be bright green, slightly crisp with a taste that you remember from eating some raw. When done, drain beans at once, keeping liquid for later use.

If using a sauce, make it while beans cook, so they are served piping hot with the sauce on the side.

LEMON SAUCE
(use metric cup and spoons)

125 ml soft margarine
15 ml grated lemon peel
1 ml chopped parsley
1 ml sweet basil OR chopped chives if no basil

Warm margarine to soften. Stir in remaining ingredients. Makes 125 ml sauce; keep leftover in covered jar for next day.

YOGURT SAUCE

125 ml homemade yogurt
2 ml lemon juice
1 ml ground sunflower seeds
salt and pepper sparingly

Other Types of Beans in Late June: Broad Beans or Fava Beans, are a favorite with some people and disliked by others. Pick the thick pods when they first turn downward. Each is beautifully lined with soft down but only the beans are eaten. The smallest are eaten raw in salads. And I have come across one note about the two-inch-long size being cooked whole, but have not yet tried these.

Medium size are cooked similarly to green beans (above), or may be done in a covered pan with bacon pieces, using the bacon fat.

If desired, pour off the fat and cook the beans in soft margarine until just fork tender. Covered with a lid, they take only four or five minutes according to size (age). Serve on warm homemade wholewheat bun with a slice of cheddar cheese, or on hot toast.

Growing Soy Beans is exciting — you can use the young pods half-grown as a green vegetable with a new taste. Don't add anything except a few grains of salt at first tasting, or a little butter or margarine. Plain homemade yogurt is about the only sauce that won't mask the unusual flavor.

As the Soys develop in the pods, use some while they still have their delicate green color. Delicious with mild cheese and hardboiled egg pushed through a flat grater as a salad, either hot or cold.

Leave some pods on the Soy plants to ripen for winter. Take up the plants before frost, leaving pods on for maturing in a warm room for a few days in fall. Then shell them quite dry and rattling, storing the dry Soys for a real taste treat in early winter.

A bean that is new to us this year is called Pea-Bean. Apparently it grows to a height between four and seven feet, so we have erected chicken wire for support. The plants seem to be strong, quick growers so it won't be long before we taste the first pods of the Pea-Beans.

Don't ignore a new vegetable just because you have never tasted it. Try it in small quantity, you will probably like it and invent interesting ways to serve it. Or you may already have ways that are different.

IF YOU'RE not fortunate enough to have a vegetable garden producing at this time of year, you have to do what this woman is doing — compare prices at the supermarket. Only Jessie Bowles has an extra interest in shopping; she teaches consumer studies at an Ontario community college, so keeping up with the price trends is part of her job. She advises that the best buys aren't always in the largest sizes.

This dish first tried on Napoleon

the 60-minute gourmet

There is an interesting legend behind the quickly made chicken dish that will be discussed here. In its original form the dish was called chicken Marengo and was served to Napoleon on the day he defeated the Austrians near the Italian village of Marengo in mid-June, 1800.

Culinary history states that, with victory at hand, Napoleon's chef, a man named Dunand, sent scouts into the countryside to find provisions for a meal. They returned with crayfish from a nearby stream, chicken, eggs, tomatoes, garlic and oil from a farm, and a skillet.

Dunand cooked the chicken in oil, tomatoes, a little water and garlic. The dish was served with the crayfish steamed over the chicken and fried eggs as a garnish. Napoleon is said to have told his chef that it was one of the finest meals he had ever eaten.

The legend continues that on his return to France, the general asked the chef to repeat the dish. He did, but he omitted the crayfish, which he considered out of place with chicken; he used wine in lieu of water, and he added fresh mushrooms. Napoleon complained vehemently and the crayfish garnish was restored and, in a classic sense, is always used with a true Marengo.

What Dunand, back in France, had created was a chicken a la provencale, the dish outlined here.

It is, indeed, simply made. Chicken parts are seasoned and cooked in oil. The pieces are then cooked in a mixture of wine and tomato with mushrooms, plus the inevitable provencale seasonings, garlic, bay leaf and thyme.

Total cooking time is about 30 minutes.

While it simmers one can easily prepare the fluffy rice dish which, for reasons unknown to me, is called riz Egyptienne, or Egyptian rice, and which has among its elements the chicken liver taken from the chicken cooked a la provencale.

POULET PROVENCALE
(Sauteed chicken with tomatoes)

1 chicken, 2½ to 3 pounds, cut into serving pieces. Salt and pepper to taste.
3 tablespoons olive oil.
1 bay leaf.
¼ teaspoon dried thyme.
⅓ cup finely chopped onion.
1½ teaspoons finely chopped garlic.
2 tablespoons flour.
½ cup dry white wine.
1 cup crushed tomatoes.
¾ cup fresh or canned chicken broth.
6 flat fillets of anchovies, chopped.
24 bottled, small pitted green olives, drained.

1. Sprinkle the chicken pieces with salt and pepper. If desired, set the chicken liver aside to prepare the rice with liver as a side dish for the chicken.

2. Heat the oil in a skillet and add the chicken pieces, skin side down. Cook over moderately high heat three to five minutes or until golden brown. Turn the pieces and continue cooking about three minutes or until golden brown on the second side.

3. dd the mushrooms and continue cooking. Add the bay leaf, thyme, onion and garlic. Cook, shaking the skillet and stirring the chicken pieces so that the other ingredients are evenly distributed around and between the chicken segments.

4. When the chicken has cooked about 10 or 12 minutes (total cooking time, start to finish) remove the pieces to a serving dish.

5. Sprinkle ingredients in skillet with flour, stirring to blend evenly.

6. Add the wine, tomatoes and broth. Stir and bring to the boil.

7. Return chicken pieces to skillet with any accumulated chicken juices. Add the anchovies, salt and pepper. Cover closely, simmer five minutes.

8. Add the olives and continue to cook five minutes. Yield: 4 servings.

RIZ EGYPTIENNE
(Rice with chicken livers)

1 chicken liver.
1 tablespoon plus 2 teaspoons butter.
¼ cup finely chopped onion.
2-3 cups fresh mushrooms, cut into half-inch dice.
1½ cups fresh or canned chicken broth.
2-3 cups cooked ham diced into quarter-inch cubes.
1. Cut the liver into quarter-inch pieces. Set aside.

2. Heat one tablespoon of butter and add the onion and mushrooms. Cook, stirring occasionally, until wilted. Add the rice and cook, stirring, until rice is coated. Add the broth and bring to the boil. Cover closely, cook 17 minutes.

3. Meanwhile, heat remaining butter in a skillet. Add liver and ham. Cook, shaking skillet and stirring until liver is cooked and ham is heated through.

4. When rice has cooked, add the liver and ham and toss gently with two-pronged fork to blend ingredients.

Yield: 4 servings.

Don't mix alcohol, pregnancy'

SASKATOON (CP) — Pregnant women who drink an average of two alcoholic beverages a day may endanger their child's development, Ruth Little of the University of Washington says.

Mothers who are heavy drinkers might give birth to children suffering from fetal alcohol syndrome, she said. Children with the syndrome are usually smaller than other babies and fail to grow to normal size.

They have unusual faces with small eyes, turned-up noses, a long distance between their nose and lips and a thin upper lip, she said. Also, they often have joint and hip problems and minor heart defects.

Not all pregnant women who are heavy drinkers give birth to children with the syndrome, but if they drink an average of six bottles of beer every day, the danger exists, she said.

Pregnant women who drink an average of two alcoholic beverages a day often give birth to children who are smaller than normal, have minor anomalies, are jittery and sleep and suck poorly.

Fetal alcohol syndrome was identified in 1973.

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

The transplantation of livers was once classed as pure fiction or speculation. However, despite untold surgical difficulties, today liver grafts are beginning to be a realistic possibility.

Dr. Thomas E. Starzl, a surgeon at the University of Colorado, for the past 15 years has been trying to salvage lives that might otherwise have succumbed to liver disease, with his courageous whole-organ transplants. In the light of the problems that he has encountered, it is quite remarkable that he has now performed more than 100 such cases. The survival rates are modest, but encouraging.

The newer, refined surgical and technical improvements have led to a very definite increase in survival rates in patients who are carefully chosen for this operation.

Transplant rejection, always a threat to this kind of surgery, is being benefited by the newer knowledge of immunology, with special drugs. Rejection of transplants is being reduced at a significant rate.

Dr. Starzl says that "the patients chosen for surgery present supreme technical challenges, with surgery lasting 12 to 18 hours. Nevertheless, we have continued to treat such patients, believing that for adults with some form of cirrhosis of the liver this is the most important future application of liver transplantation."

★ ★ ★

The ultimate hope that a vaccine against cancer will be effective seems to be nearing a reality. A group of Canadian and American research workers are collaborating in a 100-patient trial of a lung-tumor vaccine.

Among 28 patients who received the tumor vaccine after surgery, the survival rate after four years was as high as 80 per cent. These are quite remarkable statistics.

Dr. Thomas H. M. Stewart, at the University of Ottawa, and other workers in this project, hold high hopes for these vaccines against lung cancer. It is expected that this same approach may be applied, before long, to cancers elsewhere in the body.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

Love has its limits

DEAR ABBY: I'm in love with a great guy. (I'll call him Bill.) We've known each other for 10 years and have gone together for two years.

We are totally happy together. I have joined Bill in his business and we work well together. We have talked about marriage, but Bill says he will not marry me until I submit a list of all the men I've made love with. I'm 35 and have never been married. Bill is 37 and has been divorced twice.

The men I've had affairs with were all decent men and I was never promiscuous.

I do not intend to have any affairs outside my marriage and I haven't looked at another man since I started going with Bill.

I do not feel that my past relationships have anything to do with Bill or our future together. Am I wrong? And what should I do about Bill's demands?

CONN

DEAR CONN: Your past relationships are none of Bill's business. If you must either meet his demands or say goodbye to this "great guy," say goodbye.

DEAR ABBY: How about starting a campaign to get restaurants to offer children's portions at reduced prices to senior citizens? I'm over 65 and can't eat a regular-sized meal in a restaurant, but I'm not allowed to order a child's meal.

I just hate to see all that good food go to waste, Abby. Please see what you can do for us older folks.

SMALL EATER

DEAR SMALL EATER: It's a lovely idea, but unless a restaurant shows a profit it can't stay in business. An occasional child's meal at a reduced price won't bankrupt the average eatery, but if it became too popular it might.

Better ask for a doggie bag and take home your leftovers.

DEAR ABBY: What do you say to a niece who has blond hair and blue eyes and is married to a man who also has blond hair and blue eyes and just gave birth to a baby with brown eyes and coal-black hair?

UNCLE EDDIE

DEAR UNCLE: "Congratulations."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "ASHAMED IN LAUDERDALE:" Don't ever be ashamed to admit you were wrong. It's one way of saying you're smarter today than you were yesterday.

Chimney brush suppliers

Information on suppliers of brushes for cleaning chimney flues was inadvertently omitted from an article on page 34 of Saturday's Times.

Chimney brushes are not manufactured locally, but several Vancouver firms make them including Brodie Brush Co. Ltd., 891 Cambie Street, Vancouver V6B 2P5 and Empire Brush Ltd., 4159 Fraser Street, Vancouver V5V 4E9. (Brodie supplies both steel brushes and brushes made from bahia fibre; Empire makes synthetic nylon brushes exclusively.)

Rabies surfaces in Wash.

VANCOUVER, Wash. (AP) — The first confirmed case of rabies in Washington state in 40 years kept a Vancouver man in critical condition today, officials at St. Joseph Hospital said.

Lee Gammelgard's condition was stable and not deteriorating, a nursing supervisor said.

Gammelgard, 19, was admitted to the hospital on June 12 with what doctors first thought was a neurological virus. However, tests conducted at the Centre for Disease Control in Atlanta, Ga., confirmed Sunday he had rabies.

The centre said there are only three documented cases of persons surviving a confirmed diagnosis of the disease, which attacks the nervous system.

Dr. Jack Allard, chief of the Washington Department of Social and Health Services state health laboratory in Seattle, said Monday it is the first confirmed case of rabies in the state since 1939.

Dr. Robert Kim, a local neurologist who is treating Gammelgard, said the disease is too advanced to administer rabies shots.

"The main thing we can do now is maintain his vital functions and make sure his breathing and his heart is functioning," Kim said.

"The presumption is that he was bitten by something, but we don't know what," said Kim.

Kim said the average length of time it takes from the point of contact with a rabid animal to the development of symptoms is 20 days, with some patients not feeling the symptoms for 90 days.

He said that among the symptoms are pain or funny sensations in the area of the bite. As the disease spreads, the victim might have a fever, difficulty in swallowing, slurred speech, vision problems, a stiff neck and sometimes signs of delirium and disorientation.

Rabies is a virus that invades the nervous tissue and eventually causes inflammation of the brain, said Kim.

East Germany backs Nkomo

Honecker's pledge to Nkomo, co-leader of the Patriotic Front guerrilla alliance with Robert Mugabe, came just two days after President Carter urged Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev to restrain Soviet bloc involvement in African trouble spots.

Honecker told Nkomo that East Germany would give consistent backing to the Patriotic Front, saying its victory was the only path to true independence for the people of Zimbabwe Rhodesia, the official ADN news agency said.

Last month East German Defence Minister Heinz Hoffman renewed pledges of military backing for the Patriotic Front during talks with Nkomo's faction in Lusaka. East German military aid is believed to involve training guerrilla units.

A spokesman for Nkomo's Zimbabwe African Peoples Union (ZAPU) said the African leader arrived in East Berlin last Thursday, a day before the Vienna summit talks between Carter and Brezhnev began. The East German press did not report his visit until Monday.

Marais Viljoen succeeds Vorster

CAPE TOWN (Reuter) — Marais Viljoen was inaugurated Tuesday as South Africa's fifth president in succession to John Vorster, who resigned two weeks ago over the so-called slush funds scandal.

At a ceremony in Cape Town's Great Church, Viljoen, 63, was sworn in by Chief Justice Frans Rumpff. A church service was led by a Dutch Reformed minister and an Anglican bishop.

Earlier in the day, Viljoen, the governing National party candidate for the presidency, received 155 votes in an electoral college composed of both houses of parliament.

His nearest opponent, Sir de Villiers Greaff, former leader of the opposition and candidate of the New Republic party, had 23 votes and Guerino Bozzoli, backed by the Progressive Federal party, received 17.

DC-10 groundings rapped as 'absurd'

WASHINGTON (AP) — An official of the McDonnell Douglas Corp., defending the company's grounded DC-10 jetliner, says investigators have found no design flaws in the airplane that might have led to last month's DC-10 crash in Chicago that claimed 273 lives.

John Brizendine, president of the company's Douglas Aircraft division, said much of the recent criticism of the DC-10 was "absurd" and "obviously irresponsible."

With inspections and proper maintenance procedures, "there is no reason for the DC-10 fleet not to be in operation," he said in a statement.

The U.S. Federal Aviation Administration suspended the plane's type certificate June 6 after hairline cracks were found in the engine mounting assemblies of some of the jets. The cracks were discovered during inspections ordered after the crash of an American Airlines DC-10 in Chicago last month.

"The pylon structure, the hydraulic and control systems and other parts of the airplane have all been put under the microscope both literally and figuratively, and always the results have been the same," Brizendine said. "No design flaws that might have caused the Chicago accident have been found."

European airlines, barred from flying DC-10s in U.S. airspace, are again flying the jets in other parts of the world. British Caledonian and Laker airlines were resuming flights today.

European aviation officials gave the green light to resume flights Monday, subject to stringent new inspection procedures. However, the only two DC-10s operated by a Canadian carrier — Wardair — remain grounded and Canadian officials have said they will follow the U.S. lead in not allowing foreign-owned DC-10s in Canadian airspace.

Government inyestigators say that in some of the jets, an engine pylon flange had been cracked because of a maintenance shortcut

The shortened maintenance procedure was discussed during hearings Tuesday, with the FAA's John Bartell saying airlines are required to tell the agency if they make major changes in the procedures.

FAA Administrator Langhorne Bond said, in response to questioning: "Our system did not pick it up (the maintenance shortcut). I want to assure you that we will cure that difficulty."

The procedure concerns how the engine and pylon are removed from the wing and reinstalled during maintenance. McDonnell Douglas recommends that the engine be taken off first, then the pylon. But some airlines shortened the procedure by removing the engine and pylon together as a 14-ton unit.

Bond said when the giant assembly is put back in place, the aft pylon bulkhead flange — a part that connects the pylon to the wing — might accidentally hit the wing support before the correct fit was found. The bumping produced the cracks.

Argentine 'disappearances' slammed

LONDON (Reuter) — Amnesty International today issued details about 2,665 persons who it says have disappeared in Argentina under the military government of President Jorge Rafael Videla.

An official of the London-based human rights organization said the list was compiled by computer from a mass of evidence. Cases range from 20-day-old baby to a man of 81.

Amnesty, winner of the 1977 Nobel Peace prize, also said it knows of more than 3,000 political prisoners being held in Argentina.

Thousands of people have been reported missing since Gen. Videla's government seized power in April, 1976, and human rights activists in Buenos Aires say they have more than 4,500 documented cases of persons who have disappeared while in the hands of the government.

Amnesty said it had submitted its list to the Organization of American States' Human Rights Commission, which is sending a team to Argentina in the next few months to investigate disappearances.

Amnesty's list of missing persons, which will be made public later today, also includes nationals from 28 other countries, among them the United States, Britain, Cuba, France, West Germany, Hungary, Italy, Japan, Sweden, Syria.

Wheat-eating 'hoppers face death from air

"I think they're as thick as they were in the 1930s," F. H. Ireland, a Belvidere farmer, said Tuesday. "But I remember them moving around more then."

Today as much as a million acres of South Dakota grassland may have to be treated with Sevin 4 Oil, a common home garden insecticide in the news recently because of objections to its use in Maine. Spraying in South Dakota was to have begun Tuesday, but was delayed a day by the first rains in five weeks.

Agricultural specialists say crop losses so far have not been appreciable. But the grasshoppers must be sprayed within the next three weeks, or the bugs will lay eggs and present an increased threat next year.

"They're just to the point where they're going to develop wings," said Gene Christensen, who ranches 10,000 acres up the White River near Kadoka in central South Dakota. "And if we don't get them now, they're going to be everywhere."

"Look at this," Christensen said, pointing to the bustling stubble that several days ago was a thriving alfalfa field. "I can count five in an area about as big as my hand."

Christensen and 15 of his neighbors have put up about $30,000 to spray a three-kilometre strip along the White River, where the insects have congregated.

The U.S. government will pay one-third of the cost and the state Legislature this month appropriated $286,000 for programs throughout South Dakota.

The insecticide to be used, Sevin 4 Oil, may cause birth defects in dogs, tests have shown. Its label warns users to avoid streams and lakes. Despite environmentalists objections, however, it recently was used in Maine to control the spruce budworm, an insect that threatened timber used by paper companies.

139 jeeps take Gandhi to court

NEW DELHI (Reuter) — India's former prime minister, Indira Gandhi, and five other persons were ordered today to appear before a special court July 18 to face conspiracy charges.

The date was fixed by the court, which was set up to try Gandhi for alleged offences during her 18-month emergency rule.

She is accused of a criminal conspiracy with the others to exert pressure on businessmen to supply 139 jeeps without payment for use in the 1977 general election campaign.

Legal proceedings began against her last week in another case in which she is charged with fasely prosecuting four government officials inquiring into her son Sanjay's Maruti car project.

In that case, due to resume June 27, she is accused with the former director of the Central Bureau of Investigations and her private secretary, R. K. Dawan.

Israeli court orders halt to West Bank settlement

TEL AVIV (AP) — The Israeli Supreme Court today ordered work stopped temporarily on a controversial new settlement on the Israeli-occupied West Bank of the Jordan River and gave the government 30 days to justify the project, Israel radio reported.

The government seized about 200 acres of Arab-owned land for the Elon Moreh project near the city of Nablus and the landowners sued in the Supreme Court, charging the government with not providing advance notice the land would be taken.

The radio said the court panel was critical of the government's seizure of the private land. A justice ministry official said Prime Minister Menachem Begin would have to present the government's case for building the settlement.

The settlement was approved June 3 by the cabinet, which split on the issue, and the settlers started moving in to prefabricated homes that were quickly erected. The United States, Egypt and other countries protested establishing a settlement at a time when talks are in progress on autonomy for Palestinian Arabs in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

Begin has defended his government's settlement policy, claiming it is a Jewish right to settle in the biblical land of Israel, which includes the West Bank.

Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan, meanwhile, published a note in which he said Israel "totally rejects" European Economic Community criticism of its settlement policy.

Monday, the nine EEC members issued a statement saying they "consider in particular that certain positions or declarations of the Israeli government represent obstacles in the search for a global settlement."

Syria, Iraq set to try merger

BEIRUT (UPI) — Syria and Iraq, longtime Arab rivals on Israel's northern frontier, agreed in principle Tuesday to merge into a single state, a top Iraqi official announced.

The announcement came at the conclusion of three days of meetings in the Iraqi capital of Baghdad between Syrian President Hafez Assad and Iraqi President Ahmed Hassan Al Bakr.

Information Minister Saad Kassem Hammoudi told a Baghdad news conference, "Iraq and Syria have agreed on the establishment of a single state, with a single central authority, a single head of state, a single cabinet, a single army . . . a single flag, a single parliament and a single national anthem."

But Hammoudi, quoted in an official Iraqi news agency dispatch monitored in Beirut, made it clear there was nuts-and-bolts work to be done before the agreement could be translated into practice.

"The principles and foundations for the establishment of the new state were agreed upon. The one thing left is (negotiation of) a constitutional formula." He said both the Syrian and Iraqi leadership were "firmly resolved to complete unity as soon as possible".

The Iraqi News Agency said Assad and Bakr signed a "political declaration" agreeing on formation of a "joint political leadership."

"By signing this declaration, we are responding to the voice of Pan-Arabism," Bakr said after the signing ceremony.

"With each step we take on the road of Arab unity, we are liberating part of the Arab nations conquered rights in the land of Palestine and (occupied) Arab territories," he said.

Despite the Iraqi leader's optimism, Western and Arab analysts said considerable ground remained to be covered before constitutional union and reunification of the two Baath (Renaissance) Party leaderships could be achieved.

Moreover, many previous attempts at Arab unity have failed and Syria and Iraq appeared to be proceeding cautiously.

BRITISH COLUMBIA ENERGY COMMISSION

This Notice refers to a Public Hearing concerning rates charged for electric service by West Kootenay Power and Light Company, Limited.

The Commission encourages customer participation in the hearing.

THE APPLICATIONS

1979 Applications

West Kootenay Power and Light Company, Limited filed two Applications in May, 1979 with the British Columbia Energy Commission. One, dated May 14, 1979, requested Commission approval of increased rates and proposed terms and conditions for all classes of customers within its service area. The other, dated May 16, 1979 requested the Commission to grant an immediate "interim" increase of 15% applicable to all rate schedules except Schedules 32, 64, 71, 73, 77, 78, 79, 83 and 84.

1976 Applications

Two previous and pending Applications filed by West Kootenay with the Commission in January and February, 1976 will be reheard at the same time. As in the case of the 1979 Applications, one relates to a request for permanent rate increases and the other for interim rate increases.

EXISTING AND INTERIM RATES

The existing rates include two interim rate increases authorized by Commission Orders No. G-12-76 and G-43-76 dated February 13, and December 7, 1976 respectively. The interim increase elements of the existing rates are subject to refund with interest at 9% per annum.

Further interim rate increases were authorized by Commission Order No. G-12-79, dated June 1, 1979, to be effective July 1, 1979. This interim rate increase is also subject to refund with interest at 9% per annum.

THE PUBLIC HEARING

The public hearing will involve all four Applications and will commence at the Nelson Rod and Gun Club, 801 Railway Street, in Nelson, British Columbia at 9 o'clock in the forenoon on Tuesday, October 30, 1979.

PUBLIC INSPECTION OF APPLICATIONS

The Applications and supporting material filed to date are available for inspection by interested persons at any office of West Kootenay Power and Light Company, Limited or at the office of the Commission, 21st floor, 1177 West Hastings Street, Vancouver, British Columbia.

INTERVENTIONS

Interested parties who desire to but have not heretofore intervened in either the 1976 or 1979 Applications must file on or before Tuesday, July 10, 1979, with the Commission and serve upon the Applicant a Notice of Intention to Intervene.

PREHEARING CONFERENCE

A Pre-Hearing Conference is scheduled for 9 o'clock in the forenoon on Thursday, July 19, 1979 in the Commission hearing room located on the 21st floor, 1177 West Hastings Street, Vancouver, British Columbia. The purpose of the conference is to hear submissions as to:

(a) Whether the rehearing of the 1976 Applications should be "de novo", that is, hearing all evidence relating to those Applications as if there had been no previous hearing in respect thereto.

(b) The appropriate manner for establishing just and reasonable rates for the Applicant, including in particular, the appropriate price which the Applicant should pay for power and what provisions should be made to ensure security of supply.

(c) The advisability of dividing the rehearing of the 1976 Applications and the hearing of the 1979 Applications into "subject matter" phases and what those phases might be.

(d) Such other matters as the Applicant, an Intervenor, or counsel on behalf of the Commission may advance on procedural measures which might contribute to the orderly, efficient and timely conduct of the proceedings.

FILING OF MATERIAL RELATED TO HEARINGS

By the Applicant

On or before Tuesday, August 21, 1979 the Applicant shall file with the Commission 15 copies of all material, including the written prepared evidence of its witnesses, upon which it intends to rely. Upon reasonable cause being shown by the Applicant the Commission may permit additional material to be filed by the Applicant after August 21, 1979.

Following August 21, 1979, upon the written request by an Intervenor who filed on or before July 10, 1979 with the Commission and served upon the Applicant a Notice of Intention to Intervene made to:

Mr. G. K. Harper
Secretary
West Kootenay Power and Light Company, Limited
1385 Cedar Avenue
Trail, British Columbia
V1R 4L4

the Applicant shall promptly supply to such Intervenors a copy of all material filed with the Commission by the Applicant. A copy of any material accepted for filing with the Commission by the Applicant after August 21, 1979 shall also be supplied to such Intervenor.

By an Intervenor

On or before Tuesday, September 25, 1979 an Intervenor who filed on or before July 10, 1979 with the Commission and served upon the Applicant a Notice of Intention to Intervene shall file with the Commission 15 copies, and serve upon the Applicant 3 copies, of the following:

(a) A submission containing a statement of the facts from which the nature of the Intervenor's interest may be determined.

(b) Such representations as the Intervenor may wish to make about the Applications or any of them and the disposition thereof.

(c) The written prepared evidence of his witnesses and all such documents, reports, other material upon which such Intervenor intends to rely at the rehearing and hearing.

(d) An address for service.

Tourists target of Italian thieves

ROME (AP) — Increasingly aggressive Roman thieves are working the airports, highways and narrow streets of the Italian capital, and U.S. consular officials say there has been an upsurge of crime against North American tourists.

An American couple visiting Rome on their honeymoon were the latest victims, picked clean of passports, money and jewels before they had even reached their hotel.

Starting with record crowds during the sun-splashed Easter period, Italy is experiencing a tourist boom with West Germans and North Americans leading the pack. An estimated five million U.S. citizens are expected to visit Italy this year.

The boom has also brought out the thieves, and officials say the robbers are becoming more violent.

Leslie and Robert Tortolani, married in New York last Saturday, flew into Rome on Monday and rented a car at Leonardo Da Vinci airport, but when they reached the exposition centre on the outskirts of the city, a tire blew.

Tired from their overnight flight and fried by the morning sun, the couple decided to leave the car and take a taxi to their hotel on the Via Veneto.

Mrs. Tortolani carried her shoulder bag containing $800 in cash, both passports, travellers cheques and jewelry and sat in the back of the cab while the driver and her husband, a Providence, R.I., costume jewelry manufacturer, got the luggage.

"Suddenly the door of the taxi opened and a man grabbed my bag. I was screaming at him but he kept pulling and he dragged me out of the car," Mrs. Tortolani said. "When he got the bag he smiled at me."

The thief escaped in a waiting Fiat, the same light green car that Mrs. Tortolani noticed driving behind them from the airport.

The U.S. Consulate said it was the fourth such incident involving tourists who rented a car in two weeks. Last year, co-operation between airport police and the U.S. and several West European consulates helped crack a ring of thieves who followed rented cars into the city, and usually in the area of the exposition centre, punctured a rear tire and then pounced on the vulnerable occupants when they had the trunk open and car up on a jack.

This year the U.S. consulate recorded 70 passports stolen in April and 111 stolen in May, compared with 64 in April and 82 in May, 1978, by scippatori — thieves usually striking from motorcyles or cars.

"This season the thieves are a lot more bloody minded," one U.S. official said. "In the past, if there was violence it was incidental. Now they seem determined at whatever the cost."

In one unusually violent incident, a gang knocked down and robbed a U.S. couple as they were standing on the ancient Appian Way last November, then drove over the woman's legs as they made their getaway.

Italian police blame an increase in drug use for much of the street crime. A young man shot and killed by a policeman as he tried to snatch an elderly Englishwoman's purse from a motorcycle in the cobblestone streets of Trastevere earlier this year was a heroin addict.

The West German Consulate says that tourist thefts are running about the same as last year and credited German tourists with being better prepared and more vigilant than in previous years.

Tightrope walker hurt

MUNICH, West Germany (AP) — As 4,000 horrified spectators looked on, a 23-year-old American tightrope walker lost her grip and was seriously injured in a 13-metre fall into her husband's arms. A spokesman for Circus Barun said Tosca Schroers, of Sarasota, Fla., suffered several broken bones, but would probably have been killed if her husband, a 29-year-old lion-tamer, had not caught her.

Booze bad news for Beirut

BEIRUT (AP) — Through anonymous phone calls and written threats, an organization informally known as the Khomeinis is terrorizing Moslem storekeepers in the Lebanese capital, forcing them to stop selling alcoholic beverages.

No one is sure if the Khomeinis are an outgrowth of the Shiite Moslem fundamentalism of Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini, or a hoax. Khomeini is the spiritual leader of Iran's anti-shah revolution.

The threats have added to the tension in the battered city that in pre-civil war days was known as "the playground of the Middle East." Many businessmen are taking the Khomeinis seriously.

The entrance to the Izmir, a popular restaurant in Beirut's Moslem half, is flanked by two neatly written signs that announce: "We do not serve alcohol."

There were only six patrons at the Izmir during a recent lunch hour.

"It has hurt our business, definitely," said Ghandi Kanounji, 28, the owner's son. "We used to do about $1,000 every day and now we are only doing about $350."

To the disappointment of many of his customers, Kanounji has taken down his liquor licence and cleared the shelves of whisky, beer and even arak, the potent drink that is a tradition in Lebanon.

"We got a letter under the door one morning and it said don't serve alcoholic beverages, not even beer," said Kanounji. "There was no threat. It just said if you serve alcohol, you will be disturbed, or something like that."

Similar warnings have been issued to many small-time grocers, liquor store owners and restaurateurs in the Moslem half of the city.

Beirut's wealthier, well-guarded hotels and bars have not been affected by the Khomeinis. Many larger liquor store owners are reported to have hired guards to watch their property, day and night. The Christian half of the city has not had the same problem but liquor distributors there say their sales recently have dropped off.

"We took it seriously because we don't want to lose our restaurant," he said. "We are waiting to see if there is any resolution of this, if they catch anybody."

Since the threats began last month, police report that four bars and 15 liquor stores in Beirut have been bombed. Bombings commonly occur here when merchants do not pay the protection money demanded by the para-military groups that are responsible for local security.

Advancing Viet army heads for Thai border

BANGKOK (UPI) — A large tank-supported Vietnamese force inside Cambodia today was reported moving toward the Thai border and the Thai government has ordered a military alert, Thai military sources said.

It was feared the Vietnamese were planning an incursion into Thailand to clean out more than 40,000 Khmer Rouge soldiers and civilians camped in the border area, they said.

One high ranking source said any incursion by the Vietnamese, even if only aimed at the Khmer Rouge, would be resisted by Thai force.

"We will fight to protect our territorial intergrity," he said.

Other sources said the Vietnamese force — a full division of about 10,000 men with tanks, heavy weapons and battlefield antiaircraft guns — was moving towards two points on the border.

In one area, opposite Pong Nam Rawn district 250 kilometres east of Bangkok, more than 40,000 Khmer Rouge soldiers and their followers were camped on the Thai side of the border.

The other area, just south of Aranyaprathet, 230 kilometres east of Bangkok, is close to the scene of skirmishing between the Vietnamese and the Khmer Rouge over the past two weeks.

Thai soldiers stationed in the area said Khmer Rouge soldiers sometimes fled into now depopulated Thai border areas to regroup after battles in Cambodia.

On June 14 Vietnamese artillery shelled a group of Khmer Rouge soldiers on the Thai side of the border, they said. Seven were seriously wounded with an unknown number left dead at the scene, the soldiers said.

Ayatollahs closing ranks

TEHRAN (Reuter) — Iran's top four religious leaders, all claiming direct descent from the prophet Mohammed, have concluded a meeting in the holy city of Qom which might pave the way for introduction of a strict Islamic constitution.

They met at the bedside of an ailing colleague, Ayatollah Mohammed Reza Golpaygani, in the company of Ayatollah Shahaboudin Najafi. The meeting was officially described as a courtesy visit to the sick man, but it represented a major move toward healing the rift between the governing clergy over the constitutional future of post-revolutionary Iran.

Ayatollah Shariatmadari has, until now, stood against Khomeini's moves to push through a draft charter which would consolidate the fundamentalist Islamic turn the revolution has taken.

He has said that unless the provisional government keeps its promise of elections to a constituent assembly to formulate the draft charter he would boycott a proposed referendum to approve the constitution.

Ayatollah Khomeini has said an elected assembly would take one or two years to complete its work, enabling secular factions to sabotage the Islamic nature of the revolution.

In a private letter to bazaar businessmen, he indicated he was dropping his insistence on an elected assembly and would accept official proposals for a 75-member council of examiners, as long as they were expert and competent, to approve a new constitution.

By VERNON SCOTT

The splashy $1.3 million show evokes fond memories for Ann who was featured in the 1939-40 version of George White's Scandals back in the days when Broadway was called The Great White Way.

Scott's World

"I was only 15 years old at the time," said Ann. "I've included some of the the numbers, step for step, that I danced in my first movie, New Faces of 1937 when I was only 13. I didn't forget a thing."

"Mickey and I attended Lawlor's Professional School for Children in Hollywood when we weren't working," Ann recalled. "Judy Garland, Donald O'Connor and Freddy Bartholomew were classmates.

Ann, who looks much as she did when she played Skelton's foil, says her weight is down to 122 pounds and that she is dancing better than ever.

"I worked hard to stay in shape," she said. "The 18- and 19-year-old chorus girls in Sugar Babies are dancing their feet off to keep up with me.

"What we're doing is traditional burlesque before it became dirty. It used to be as respectable as any form of entertainment. A couple of generations have grown up in this country not knowing what high class burlesque is.

Sugar Babies was born when producer Harry Rigby saw Ann in Mame on Broadway two years ago. He convinced her to star in a revival of Anything Goes with Van Johnson. Johnson was unavailable and Rigby switched his original idea to a musical revue and brought in Mickey.

"We're bringing back an era of entertainment, of laughter and music. I think audiences will be happy to see a show without social problems or downbeat messages.

OTTAWA (CP) — For the second time in succession, Canada has won special mention honor at the leading international theatrical design and architecture congress, the Prague Quadrenniale in Czechoslovakia.

The set and costume works of five designers, and architectural achievements by seven firms were entered in the Canadian exhibit at the 1979 Quadrenniale, which runs to July 2. Also displayed, to mark this as International Year of the Child, were the works of Canadian puppet and marionette theatres, principally the work of Felix Mirbt of Montreal.

Canada won special mention at the 1975 Quadrenniale for set designs by Murray Laufer of Toronto, costume designs by Francois Barbeau of Montreal, and the architecture of the new Shaw Festival theatre in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., by Roland J. Thom and Peter Smith of Toronto.

This year, the Canadian entry in the international exposition and competition were chosen by the Associated Designers of Canada, and the display was financed by the external affairs department's newly-reorganized bureau of international cultural relations.

The bureau reports that after the show opened June 6, the Canadian exhibit was given a special award for the quality it added to the show. The Quadrenniale is held every four years by the Czech ministry of culture as a world forum of scenic and costume design and theatre architecture.

Also included were designs for four National Arts Centre French theatre productions, Robert Prevost's sets and costumes for Le Cid, and Michael Eagan's work for De La Manipulation de Dieu, Le Songe (Te Dream Play), and Woyzeck. The last two toured Canada.

Prevost's design for Theatre de Nouveau Monde's production of Les Fourberies de Scapin, Astrid Janson's designs for Les Canadiens, and Esmirelda and the Hunchback of Notre Dame, for Toronto Workshop Productions, and three designs by Cameron Porteous for Vancouver Playhouse, The Crucible, Oedipus and Tales of the Vienna Woods, also were displayed.

The theatre architecture part of the Canadian exhibit included the Adelaide Court Theatre reconstruction, the Leah Posluns Theatre and Young People's Theatre in Toronto, the new Citadel and Stage Three theatres in Edmonton, Vancouver's City Stage and David Y.H. Lui theatres, the Grand Theatre reconstruction in London, Ont., the Huron County Playhouse near Grand Bend, Ont., and Le Theatre du Bois de Coulonge, Quebec City.

The external affairs department said part of the exhibit will be shown after the Quadrenniale at the Canadian Cultural Centre in Paris, at Canada House in London, and possibly in Brussels.

Monday nights put CBS in top spot

NEW YORK (AP) — CBS knocked ABC out of first place in the networks' ratings race for the second time in four weeks, thanks in large measure to a strong Monday night lineup.

CBS listed three of the four most-watched shows in the week ending June 17, all but Three's Company, which was No. 1 in the ratings for the fifth straight week.

Three shows from CBS's Monday night schedule were right behind — WKRP in Cincinnati, M-A-S-H and Lou Grant, and the distribution helped the network to a rating for the week of 14.7. ABC was second at 13.8, with NBC third with a rating of 12.9.

KUALA LUMPUR (AP) — Six vessels carrying 585 Vietnamese refugees were towed from the east coast of Malaysia into international waters today and sent on their way, a military official announced.

The official told reporters the six vessels arrived in Malaysia in the last two days and the refugees had not been admitted to government refugee camps, which now hold more than 60,000 Vietnamese awaiting resettlement in other countries.

It marked the second time this week refugees had been towed out to sea. The boats were towed away from the coast of Trengganu, about 270 kilometres northeast of Kuala Lumpur, and from Johore, 190 kilometres southeast of the capital, the official said.

He said the refugees were given food, fuel and other necessities. Refugee officials said the boats were small but seaworthy and equipped with motors.

Last Friday, Deputy Prime Minister Mahathir Mohamad announced that all Vietnamese refugees in Malaysia would be put out to sea and any more arrivals would be shot on sight. However, after an international outcry, Prime Minister Hussein Onn on Monday withdrew the threat of mass deportations and shootings.

Boats that are unseaworthy will be repaired, supplied with fuel, food and other essentials, and then towed away with those who arrived aboard them, officials said. If the Vietnamese damage their boats beyond repair, they will be put into other boats and towed to international waters.

Meanwhile, Home Minister Ghazali met with an Indonesian official to discuss the possibility of setting up a large camp on an Indonesian island south of Singapore that could accommodate 200,000 or 300,000 refugees to await transfer to Western countries.

In Manila, Philippines President Ferdinand Marcos today called on Southeast Asian countries to adopt a single, unified policy on Indochina refugees.

Vietnam willing to talk it over

BANGKOK (AP) — Vietnam announced today it is ready to attend any United Nations conference to solve the Vietnamese refugee problem, for which it blamed the United States and China.

It said it would "severely punish" Vietnamese who fled their country and those who helped them flee Vietnam illegally.

The foreign ministry statement was in apparent response to mounting world criticism of Vietnam over the refugees and calls for an international conference to solve the problem.

Little guy blamed for woes

Barry Bosworth, outgoing director of the Council on Wage and Price Stability, warned that despite soaring prices for food, fuel and housing the average worker should not expect any real increase in wages.

"I think the problem is the average American and it's not a pleasant fact," Bosworth told a meeting of Women in Housing and Finance. But unless the average worker changes his ways, he predicted, the United States may be headed down the same economic road as Britain.

Bosworth said that in the absence of any real growth in productivity there could be no real wage increases without adding to the inflation problem. "Unless we do more work (this year) than we did last year then there can be no (wage) increase," he said.

Therefore, Bosworth said, "any attempt by the individual to increase his own standard of living has to come at the expense of somebody else. Every American catches up (on inflation) by taking it out of the hide of someone else."

Bosworth pointed to the current fuel demands of farmers and independent truckers as an example of the type of self-interest that addds to inflationary pressures.

"One of the reasons that the energy crisis is so severe . . . is that one group after another has come in for special allocations," Bosworth said.

Singling out the farmers' request for 100 per cent of last year's fuel allocation to harvest this year's crops, Bosworth said "if they use it all for the harvest we ought to have the most fantastic harvest in history. Everyone wanted a little more than needed and then sold the excess to someone else."

Bosworth, who will be leaving COWPS this summer, said the current inflation outlook calls for "further blows" to the government effort to moderate inflation. "Energy has now replaced food as the major inflation problem," Bosworth said, "and people are going to be shocked when they see what utility prices are going to be."

Uganda leadership again in dispute

KAMPALA (AP) — Yusufu Lule resigned as president of Uganda today after a dispute with his political opponents. Godfrey Binaisa was reported named to succeed him.

Political sources said Binaisa, a politically conservative, pro-Western figure, would be sworn in as president later today. Binaisa, exiled during the Amin years, had been practising law in New York City. He is a former Ugandan attorney-general.

Lule yielded to his political enemies when it became evident he could no longer maintain national unity.

Lule's resignation was reported in a statement distributed by the official Uganda news agency and broadcast by Uganda government radio today.

"I did not wish to see any conflict developing around my personality . . . ," Lule's statement said. "We now hand over to our colleagues."

Kampala, the capital, remained calm after the midday broadcast, despite a spate of rumors of plots, planned detentions of cabinet ministers and the possible return from exile of Milton Obote, the authoritarian president overthrown by Amin eight years ago.

The dispute between Lule, a 67-year-old former teacher and Commonwealth administrator, and his opponents centred on two rounds of ministerial appointments Lule made this month to expand his cabinet to 24 men from 15.

Members of the 30-man National Consultative Council, a temporary legislature that claims supreme policy-making powers within the coalition, complained that Lule did not clear the appointments with them.

Jury retires in Thorpe trial

LONDON (AP) — The jury in the Jeremy Thorpe trial retired for the night after failing to reach a verdict on whether the former Liberal party leader and three other men conspired to murder the ex-male model who claimed the politician had been his lover.

The panel met for six hours before it was sequestered in a London hotel.

Judge Sir Joseph Cantley wound up his long summation in four minutes today after telling the nine men and three women on the jury Tuesday that the case against Thorpe was "almost entirely circumstantial."

"We have to decide . . . if Mr. Thorpe had a motive which would really go so far as to impel him to conspiracy for getting rid of (Norman) Scott," Cantley said.

Thorpe, 50, and the three co-accused are charged with plotting to kill Scott because they feared his talk of homosexual relations with the politician in the 1960s would wreck Thorpe's career.

A Permanent Home Equity Loan can get you the cash you need from the home you have.

Up to $75,000.

If you're a home owner, you're in a preferred position to qualify for a Permanent Home Equity Loan. That's because you already have the security for the loan in the equity you've built up in your home. Depending on the value of your property and the amount outstanding on your first mortgage, you can borrow from $5,000 to $75,000. And you have flexible repayment options. Choose an open loan which may be paid off at any time without bonus or penalty with a 12½%* interest charge. Or choose a "closed type" loan at 12%* interest. Both may be five year term loans, and may be amortized up to 25 years.

Whatever your reason for needing cash, talk to The Permanent. The Home Equity Loan may solve your needs. The home you have can be the cash you need.

CBC vows more coverage in lieu of Victoria station

The CBC promised Tuesday to provide improved radio and television coverage for Victoria and Vancouver Island as an alternative to its scrapping of plans for a Victoria television station.

Ron Fraser, vice-president of corporate affairs for the government-owned agency, told the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission that the CBC would apply to produce 25 hours a week of Victoria and Vancouver Island programming, increase its news coverage of the island by its Vancouver Channel 2 and apply for rebroadcasters to serve parts of the mainland across from the island.

The combination was a viable alternative to the original plan to establish a CBC Channel 10 in Victoria, said Fraser, adding that it could be provided at a more reasonable cost and is more compatible with financial resources.

Fraser told the federal regulatory agency that total capital investment required for the Channel 10 would have been $9 million — a six-fold increase since the original estimate of $1.5 million for the project in 1973.

In addition, annual operating cost estimates have tripled, Fraser said.

The increased costs together with a $71 million trimming of CBC funds through the federal spending restraint program made the Channel 10 plan prohibitive, Fraser said.

"We regret this but we just can't avoid it," said Fraser. "That $71 million cut was just too much for us to absorb."

The change in plans would mean that a move to disaffiliate privately-owned CHEK-TV from the CBC will be delayed until late 1980 or the spring of 1981.

D. M. Smith, executive vice-president of British Columbia Broadcasting Ltd., which owns CHEK-TV, said he supported the CBC plan but would like to see the commission direct the CBC to complete its plans by September, 1980.

He said BCTV had been promising private network service to the Victoria area for 10 years.

Fraser added later that he could appreciate Smith's concern but that he did not know if the CBC could meet that deadline.

Charles Dalfen, deputy chairman of the commission, said he also regretted the CBC's change in plans.

Buoys' sea battle blows over

Months of sloshing about in North Pacific currents are over for three oceanographic buoys washed up in the Gulf of Alaska and Queen Charlotte Islands.

They are part of a deployment of drift buoys launched at sea last Sept. 28 by the offshore oceanography section of the Institute of Ocean Sciences, and were tracked by satellite to trace surface currents.

Physicist Sus Tabata said two are in Alaskan waters, one believed to be ashore on Montague Island at the top of the Gulf of Alaska, and the other one nearby.

The U.S. Coast Guard has been asked to check them out and try to recover the valuable instrument packs.

The third buoy had been attached to a drogue as a means of controlling the effects of surface waves and wind, but when it was recovered at Hunter Point on Marble Island, west coast of the Queen Charlottes, the sea anchor had broken free and was lost.

Leadership stressed for Sidney

Two mayoralty candidates in the June 30 byelections in Sidney told an all-candidates' meeting Tuesday they could provide leadership to unify council.

The council has been split on many issues since the resignation of ex-mayor Dick Leigh on April 30.

Ald. James Lang and Saanich school trustee Norma Sealey said leadership is the issue in the byelection and they could provide positive direction to council.

Both mayoralty candidates, as well as candidates contesting a vacant council seat, said they would have no objections to televised council meetings.

Aldermanic candidate Thomas Doyle said he favored better commuter service for workers to Victoria as well as an in-town bus service for the elderly.

Marjorie MacWilliams said she would have an open door policy, always ready to hear residents' problems.

Bonnie Braithwaite, contesting the vacant seat on the school board, said she would try to serve the best interests of the educational community.

Roy Hyndman was unable to attend the meeting but a speaker on his behalf said he (Hyndman) was committed to excellence in education.

Russ Simpson said he was persuaded to run for trustee because of the annual budget and its effect on taxation. He said the provincial government should be urged to lift the burden of school taxation from the homeowner.

Power stations shelved: Hydro

At least two power generating projects on Vancouver Island have had to be shelved in recent years because of environmental problems, a B.C. Hydro and Power Authority spokesman said Tuesday.

Gordon Roper, Hydro's Island manager, said that plans for generating stations at Duncan Bay, near Campbell River, and on the Kokish River, near Beaver Cove, were both halted because of environmental problems.

"Duncan Bay has fish problems and we've abandoned it, at least abandoned it temporarily," he said.

Roper said similar difficulties have forced Hydro planners to put aside a proposal for a dam on the Kokish River.

"That's been put on the shelf until those problems can be resolved," he said.

Roper said that Hydro's only immediate possibility for generating more power on the Island is to install an additional generator on the Campbell River system, which already has three dams.

Power supply waits gov't OK

B.C. Hydro can meet Crown Zellerbach's timetable for additional power supplies to Vancouver Island if quick approval for a new cable route is received from the provincial government, a Hydro spokesman said today.

Crown Zellerbach Tuesday said it will install a $171 million newsprint machine at Elk Falls, near Campbell River, if Hydro goes ahead with the new cable before the end of summer.

Hydro information officer David Robertson said directors are expected to select the cable route at a meeting Friday and then the issue will be turned over to the provincial environment and land use committee for approval.

Hydro has already opened bids for the cable but will not award a contract until and if approval is received from ELUC.

A Norwegian company, STK, has offered to supply and install the cable for $195,957,000. The only other bid is from Pirelli of Italy at $204,115,448. Both bids were considerably above cost estimates. Lower bid is not necessarily accepted and Pirelli has an advantage because it installed the previous cable to Vancouver Island.

On Tuesday, Crown Zellerbach directors gave formal approval to a decision announced earlier this year to install another newsprint machine at Elk Falls. The company said the machine would require the power which the proposed line would bring to the Island in the fall of 1983.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	Pass	3 ♠ (!)	Pass
4 ♠	Pass	5 NT (!)	Pass

Opening lead — king of spades.

The bidding by North suggests that he should have his head examined, but nobody would criticize the final contract, which is laydown. It just goes to show that crazy bids are sometimes very successful, even though they don't mean what they seem to say.

About thirty years ago some genius came up with the idea that a jump-shift response one level higher than necessary indicates a void in that suit, good trump support and a potential slam in the suit named by the opening bidder. That accounts for North's three spade bid.

Certainly the North hand is ideally suited for such a convention. The moment partner opens one heart, North should start thinking in terms of a slam — even though he has only 12 high-card points.

North bids three spades partly because he does not know whether South's high cards are where they're needed. South may have great spade strength and three club losers, or great club strength and three spade losers.

A three diamond response to one heart does not solve the slam problem. It would alert South to the possibility of a slam without specifying the spade void and the heart fit. It would also suggest greater high-card values.

But a three spade bid, using the void-showing convention, portrays the picture very well. It enables South to cuebid clubs, because he knows that his relatively few high cards are in the right suits.

North is delighted to hear the four club bid. His only remaining problem is South's trump holding. Accordingly, North makes use of the grand slam force convention by leaping to five notrump. This commands South to bid seven hearts with two of the three top honors.

So South bids seven hearts, not knowing what kind of hand his partner has. He simply hopes that North has not gone completely berserk.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Thursday, June 21
By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (Mar. 21-Apr. 19): Emphasis on payments, collections, discarding what amounts to excess baggage. Cycle is such that you are likely to be rewarded for past efforts. A legal matter could aid cause — know it and stand tall. The money will be "released."

TAURUS (Apr. 20-May 20): You get "new lease." Accent confidence, independence, fresh starts — be open to creative urges and love. Leo, Aquarius persons figure prominently. Avoid lifting heavy objects. Don't be shy. Make known your presence in "dramatic fashion."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Aura of mystery surrounds activities — you can use this to advantage. Be discreet — don't tell all you know. Emphasize glamour, intuition, public appeal. Means "exploit" special attention you are going to receive tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Accent on celebration, good news, expanding horizons, social contacts, travel and relief from tensions. Gemini, Sagittarius persons figure in exciting scenario. You succeed on "third try."

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Stick to facts, despite urgings by some that it would be harmless to "stretch the truth." Your integrity, reputation could be at stake. Know it, act accordingly. Aquarius, Taurus, Scorpio persons figure in important ways.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Lunar aspect is favorable — open lines of communication. Publish, publicize, advertise. Imprint style. Get "straight story" from member of opposite sex who has been evasive.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Delve deep — you enter "forbidden territory." You will emerge with more knowledge — and potential for financial gain. One close to you confides dilemma. Be openminded. Refuse to cast first stone.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Patience becomes ally. Pacing, timing are more essential than in past weeks. Know it and do something about it. Take nothing for granted. Check quotations, sources, legal nuances. Partner or mate confides "indiscretion." It is not the end of the world!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Practical affairs dominate — money, responsibility, physical attractions command — and demand — attention. Capricorn, Cancer individuals play prominent roles. Accent on getting job done, satisfying dependents and getting needed relaxation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis on change, travel, variety, speculation, exciting aspects of a relationship. Finish what you start, reach beyond current expectations. Yes, you could grab brass ring! Young person pays a very meaningful compliment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get chance to be more independent, creative within restricted area. There are apparent contradictions, but your position is strengthened. Past investment gains in value. Another Aquarian figures in scenario.

PISCES (Feb. 19-Mar. 20): Follow through on hunch, make inquiries, learn through teaching process. Accent on relatives, messages, short journey. Key is to give full play to intellectual curiosity. Highlight flexible approach, versatility and humor.

IF JUNE 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you can laugh at your own foibles, you are artistic and very much aware of body image. Gemini, Sagittarius persons play important roles in your life. September could be your most significant month of 1979, a year featuring production, business, intensified relationships. You have more authority, responsibility, pressure and the chance to earn more money. You make domestic change, adjustment in July. Marital status is emphasized. You survived last year's setback. You are on road to recovery. Emotional wound is healed — even if you are not yet aware of it. In matters of speculation, you are fortunate with the number 5.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

When Linda was a year older than Ruth was when Linda was a year older than Ruth was when Linda was a year older than Ruth is now, Ruth was a third as old as Linda was when Ruth was a third as old as Linda is now.

One of them is in her 'teens, and we have taken ages in complete years. How old must they be?

Tough plants for poor soil

Our normally dry summers offer an excellent opportunity to newcomers to make note of plants which appear to thrive in dry soil conditions.

Much depends on soil. It may be shallow and light with little moisture-holding ability, or it may be hard clay lumps resistant to shower penetration. These are extremes, but in the middle is soil that was once or twice cultivated and then neglected.

These soils are found around some of the large old frame homes that were formerly planted and tended with care but have known neglect for possibly 20 years.

The plants that survive under these conditions are often a surprise. One notices the sturdy Rhododendron ponticum written about recently, with its attractive mauve-purple flowers massed over the dark evergreen leaves. Since this shrub seldom suffers winter damage, its shape remains trimly rounded and fallen flowers and annual drop of old leaves provide sufficient nutrients to the soil.

In gravelly soil or in high spots among rock, the sun-loving California Canyon-poppy used to be a prominent feature.

This is Romneya coulteri with large, rose-scented white blossoms looking like crumpled tissue. The roots are tough with very few feeding hairs; they make their way through dry clay, under concrete, and have been sending up flowering stems in the dry gutters of the old James Bay streets in the days before the high-rises. They were a magnificent sight in summer and no one molested them.

If a plant of this Romneya can be found in a local nursery it is worth getting for long-term interest. Give it a well drained, rather poor soil and don't disturb its roots when planting or attempt to move it later. Once established it is certainly drought resistant, and spectacularly beautiful. It will spread by underground runners if allowed the space.

At the other end of the scale for size are a number of lowly pinks that survive drought in borders of rocky banks at edges of old driveways. Because of their habit of elongating their growth unless checked, pinks reach new ground, often rooting as they go into tiny pockets of humus. Flowers still persist, though less beautiful than they should be.

Grey-leaved shrubs are resistant to drought (as to hot sun and light frosts) for most are covered with tiny hairs which prevent total loss of moisture from the green leaf beneath.

Among them are Lavender with grey leaves, Rosemary with green surface and grey beneath, and the seldom seen Jerusalem-sage (Phlomis fruticosa) another Mediterranean shrub.

The leaves of Phlomis are like felt, the flower stems are stiff and upright, carrying whorls of interesting yellow flowers during June, July and into August. This, and another plant of the same genus but a herbaceous perennial, came from seed received through distribution by the Royal Horticultural Society of London some years ago. They are both durable, unusual, resistant to frosts of the past 20 years, and resistant to wind. Still, they do well where they grown in a piece of unimproved stiff clay without direct watering.

Other shrubs which continue with annual flower displays when once established are Kolkwitzia, Escallonias, many Cotoneasters, and Yucca, the desert plant now coming into flower.

While this partial list will not make a satisfactory ornamental garden for everybody, the plants will provide color and interest during drought periods and also be presentable during winter. Water can be better used for needy flowering plants and in the vegetable garden, which cannot produce without water.

Electric heart gives goat life

TOKYO (AP) — A Tokyo University medical team reported a two-year-old goat has survived for 155 days with an artificial heart. An official at the university's Electronics Research Institute said the heart — two pumps attached to four tubes — was inserted Jan. 9. He said a University of Utah team kept a calf alive 225 days on an artificial heart. He said that keeping the goat alive was an advance because a goat is a much weaker animal than a calf.

Uranium miners' breath put Geiger dials in spin

By WARD SINCLAIR

WASHINGTON (WP) — It was the deepest kind of human tragedy, but the widow of John Taylor Howes, a uranium miner, summoned up language everyone could understand.

"Even after he had washed his hands at the mine, he would light up like a Christmas tree on the Geiger counter when he got home . . . the counter would go crazy," she said.

Mrs. Howes, of Junction, Utah, and the widows of two other men who worked at the BCA uranium mine at Marysvale, Utah, were in Washington Tuesday as witnesses before a Senate public health subcommittee investigating the health effects of low-level radiation.

Their husbands died from lung cancer, which they and others, including Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (Dem-Mass.), the subcommittee chairman, believe was induced by inadequate protection at the now-closed mine.

George Val Snow of Salt Lake City, whose father and brother worked in the same mine and then died of lung cancer, told a similar story.

Snow, a tall, strapping man of 54, had a list of names of 42 friends who worked with him at the mine. Twenty-two of them have died of cancer, he said.

"I believe all the miners at Marysvale will die of lung cancer," he said.

Snow also mined uranium for 10 years at the BCA operation. He said, "I don't think the government did all it could to protect the health of the miners . . . a lot more men would have been more careful if they had known more."

The miners' exposure to radon gases in the underground mine was so intense, he said, that they could "blow a Geiger counter off the scale" simply by breathing on it after coming to the surface.

Mrs. Alvin Christensen of Marysvale said her husband, who died a year ago, had the same experience: He could breathe on the radiation detection device and send the counter soaring.

"It is almost unimaginable that these circumstances could happen in the United States of America," Kennedy said. "The government knew of the dangers, yet the miners were allowed to walk into the mine without an awareness of the dangers."

Tuesday's hearing was another in a series being conducted by the Kennedy subcommittee, exploring the health impacts of atmospheric atomic weapons tests in Nevada in the 1950s and radiation related ailments suffered by miners and the general population in the area.

"The nation's chemical chickens have come home to roost," said Sen. Orrin G. Hatch (Rep-Utah), who urged that worker-protection laws be upgraded and federal help provided for the cancer victims of radiation fallout.

"We are united in recognizing that the federal government has a responsibility to solve a problem which it originally created" with the atmospheric testing program of two decades ago, Hatch said.

Other testimony Tuesday followed these lines:

—Eugene M. Zuckert, a member of the Atomic Energy Commission between 1952 and 1954, said that too little attention was given public health during that early period of intense development of atomic weapons.

"There was no attempt to deceive the public, but I wouldn't have had the biological-medical people investigating themselves . . . . The difficulty lay in restricted vision, demands of the program," he said.

—A panel of industrial hygienists complained that early efforts to caution the AEC and to get more protection for miners went unheeded for the most part. As a result, they contended, untold sickness occurred among uranium ore miners that could have been avoided.

Fisherman survives shark battle

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (UPI) — An Orlando man who fought off sharks that attacked him after his boat sank about 16 kilometres off Cape Canaveral was recovering today from his ordeal.

The shark attack came about two hours before a fisherman rescued 56-year-old William Shaw Tuesday morning.

Shaw, who was listed in fair condition at Cape Canaveral Hospital, left Port Canaveral at 5 a.m. Monday morning. His 5-metre boat began taking on water and sank about 7:30 p.m. that evening.

He spent the night and morning lashed to life preservers and just before dawn the sharks showed up.

"I was ready to die until the sharks came," he said.

He stabbed one of them with a knife as they attacked his legs, in hopes they would be attracted to the bleeding shark and leave him alone.

Shaw was in high spirits after his battle with the sharks. "I didn't know I was as bold as I am. I feel like a hero. I'm the champ," he said.

U.K. isle fights ban on the rod

DOUGLAS, Isle of Man (Reuter) — The Parliament of this Irish Sea island has renewed its fight to retain corporal punishment despite a European Court of Human Rights ruling that whipping juvenile offenders is degrading.

The Tynwald (Parliament) voted Tuesday to ask the British government to seek a special exemption from the European convention of human rights which prohibits the island's traditional policy of birching — beating offenders with a one-metre bundle of branches.

Birching, which is usually reserved for young male offenders, has been stopped on the Isle of Man since the European Court in Strasbourg made its ruling in April last year.

If the British government fails to take up the case for the semi-autonomous island, the Tynwald may decide to withdraw from the convention.

Planet rings may be gas

WASHINGTON (AP) — The invisible rings of the planet Uranus, unlike the rock-strewn rings of Saturn, may be gaseous material trailing in the orbits of small satellites, says a U.S. Naval Observatory astronomer.

Thomas Van Flandern said Tuesday that the nine narrow rings discovered circling Uranus in March, 1977, do not appear to be rings in the ordinary sense.

Although the rings have never been seen, scientists know they are there because of the way they scatter the light of background stars. Most of the rings are only a few kilometres wide, with the largest varying in width from 20 to 104 kilometres.

But the thinness and location of the rings, coupled with the little knowledge available on their composition, gives them characteristics that defy known laws of planetary activity, Van Flandern says.

The best-known planetary rings in the solar system belong to Saturn. The rings, hundreds of kilometres wide, are believed made up of dust, rocks and large boulders. The Voyager 1 spacecraft recently discovered a narrow ring around Jupiter.

The rings of Uranus, the seventh planet from the sun, seem to be composed of a material that reflects less light than the blackest coal dust — making them virtually invisible, Van Flandern says in a report published in Science magazine.

"There may be a single body orbiting in each of the observed ring locations which sheds gaseous material as it orbits," Van Flandern said in an interview. "The rings could be constantly renewed, with a fresh one forming before the old one dissipates."

The outermost ring of Uranus, a giant planet 46,400 kilometres in diameter compared with earth's 12,640 kilometres, is located about 48,000 kilometres from the planet. This is well within the orbits of the planet's five known moons, the closest being Miranda circling 128,000 kilometres out.

Van Flandern says his theory for Uranus' mysterious rings seems to be the best explanation so far proposed, but some astronomers disagree.

"Some say it's the best idea yet, while others say implausible objects so small can form rings," he said. "I've never been involved with any theory that didn't get mixed reaction."

Van Flandern said a spacecraft mission may be able to solve the mystery, but none is planned.

Disputes rise 40%

OTTAWA (CP) — Time lost through labor disputes increased 40 per cent during March from the February level, government statistics released Monday show.

The department of labor released its monthly strike and lock-out figures showing 667,450 man-days were lost during March through work stoppages. This compared with a February total of 479,410 man-days.

The labor department said 44 per cent of the time lost through work stoppages in the first quarter of the year was as a result of the strike, now settled, at Inco Metals Co. in Sudbury.

Truckers set mass shutdown

NOW THAT'S MILEAGE: A technical high school student pilots his entry in a special economy marathon across the finish line in Enschede, Holland, claiming a world record of 1,600 miles per gallon of gas at a speed of 9 mph. A small, light-weight body and three bicycle wheels may not be the most comfortable way to get around, but it could be the answer to the fuel crisis.

Times News Services

Independent U.S. truckers were poised for an unavoidable nationwide shutdown at midnight tonight in a protest against the oil industry, a trucking spokesman said today.

William Hill, chairman of the Independent Truckers Group, said on the NBC Today television show in Washington that it was too late to call off the shutdown set for 11:59 p.m., local time tonight, because there were too many truckers groups involved.

An Alabama trucker was shot and killed today as violence flared again in connection with the U.S.-wide fuel price and speed limit protest by independent drivers.

Alabama state troopers said Robert Tate of Birmingham was shot and killed while standing in a cotton field beside his disabled tractor-trailer rig which had jack-knifed off U.S. 72 near Tuscumbia. The officers said Tate bled to death after a shot fired by a medium-calibre rifle severed an artery in his left leg.

A state of emergency was declared Tuesday in Minnesota where the National Guard was mobilized to protect trucks and police escorts were ordered for convoys in Indiana and Florida as protesting truckers blockaded food and fuel terminals.

Meanwhile, crops rotted in the fields in parts of the South and some supermarkets started to run short of produce.

Gunfire ripped into trucks in Wisconsin, Utah, Virginia and Ohio. Nails scattered on major truck routes in central Florida punctured the tires of at least six sand trucks. Gunmen driving cars without licence plates prowled wooded areas of Mississippi, warning drivers to turn back.

Florida highway patrol spokesman Capt. J. E. Love said officials have organized a convoy of about 100 rigs to haul watermelons, tomatoes and other freight to the Northeast. The convoy was to leave Lake City, in northern Florida, today under the protection of state troopers.

Gov. Bob Graham's office contacted governor's offices in states along Interstates 75 and 95 seeking protection for the convoy when it crosses the Florida border, said spokeswoman Jill Chamberlain.

John Stiles, an agriculture official who set up the convoy, said: "For every three days we can't move our watermelons, 1,000 loads are going to rot in the fields. At an average $2,000 a load, that adds up."

In Minnesota, Gov. Al Quie declared a state of emergency and said he is ordering the National Guard, the state patrol and local officers to escort trucks whose drivers want to resume hauling. Arrangements are incomplete but it appears that about 200 national guardsmen would be called out initially.

Fuel rationing starts today in Massachusetts and Connecticut and in New York City and its suburbs. On

3 to 5 cent gas, oil hike

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government will proceed with a $1-a-barrel increase July 1 for domestic oil.

The decision means consumers will face increases of between three and five cents a gallon for gasoline and home heating oil beginning Sept. 1 after existing crude oil stocks have been used.

Energy Minister Ray Hnatyshyn told reporters today after meeting Alberta energy minister Merv Leitch that talks on future oil price increases will be held in the coming months.

A second $1-a-barrel increase is scheduled Jan. 1, but neither Hnatyshyn nor Leitch would comment on possible change in that agreement.

Hnatyshyn said he did not expect current gasoline rationing problems in the U.S. to affect Canadian supplies.

In London, however, Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabia's oil minister, has warned that the world faces an oil crisis of unprecedented magnitude by as early as 1988 if demand continues at the present rate.

Speaking Tuesday at a London conference on shipping and prospects for international trade, Yamani warned that when demand begins to outpace supply, "the pronounced shortfall which may emerge is likely to push market prices to levels three to four times the current one."

U.S. going neurotic over gas

By CLAUDE ADAMS
FP News Service

WASHINGTON — Last weekend, a suburban Washington woman with less than two gallons of gas left in the tank of her 1979 Volvo drove around for an hour in a fruitless search for a gas station that was open.

A 72-year-old woman in a giant white Cadillac spent the night sleeping in her car after parking it in a six-block-long gas queue. Nine hours later, she filled her tank with 22 gallons and let out a hoot of joy.

A TV cameraman shooting film on the lineups was run down by a motorist worried about losing his place in a queue.

After President Jimmy Carter's nationally-televised address to the nation on the SALT treaty Monday night, telephone callers to the White House spent more time deploring the gas crisis than in praising efforts to make the world safe from nuclear war. "Less salt and more gasoline," is how one White House spokesman described the tone of the calls.

The U.S. gasoline crisis is leaving a mark on the national psyche. It is literally driving people to the analyst's couch. The shortage, psychiatrists say, is triggering serious anxiety, self-doubt and fitful rage.

Patients are showing symptoms that range from extreme frustration (banging the steering wheel in gas queues that stretch to the horizon) to what the experts call "classic panic behavior."

"Most of what I hear are fantasies of what they'd like to do to a person who cut in a gas line," says Washington analyst Edward Kirby.

The prospect of a dry tank and reduced mobility is turning the U.S. into a nation of neurotics.

The car, he says, is both a "cocoon" that offers privacy and a vehicle that represents "freedom and speed and power."

But the angry American is not about to leave his car in the garage. Polls show that 75 per cent of Americans say they would like to cut down on gasoline consumption by sharing a ride to work, yet only 10 per cent join car pools.

One American out of 12 uses public transportation.

"People, when confronted with an energy crisis, do not want to change their behavior," says Ricardo Dobson, a researcher with the Chase Manhattan Bank. "They want to blame the crisis on somebody else."

U.S. drivers, who consume one of every nine barrels of oil produced in the world, refuse to believe there's a real shortage, and those who do are convinced it is a temporary aberration.

This view is expressed time and time again in man-on-the-street interviews.

Daniel Yergin, a researcher at the Harvard Business School, says his studies have shown that no amount of gas price increases will deter the motorist from filling his tank. "As long as he owns his particular car, he'll continue filling it," Yergin said in an interview.

Psychoanalyst Ed Kirby says nearly all his recent patients have expressed some kind of frustration, action or fantasy related to the energy crisis.

He says they talk about "helplessness, of being manipulated" by the Arabs or the oil companies or their national leaders or their fellow motorists who are conspiring to jump the gas lines.

Rip-off on car parts denied

Some Victoria-area automotive parts dealers today acknowledged they charge more than the manufacturers' list price but denied that they are cheating the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

They said their higher charges primarily reflect freight costs involved in bringing parts to Victoria.

The spokesmen were commenting on a letter sent to all dealers by ICBC president Robbie Sherrell, complaining about the "surcharge" practice.

Sherrell claims in the letter that a survey by the Crown-owned insurance corporation shows some dealers are charging as much as 45 per cent above list price, while the average across the province is about 15 per cent.

He asked each parts dealer to provide an assurance in writing by June 30 that it would charge no more than the manufacturers' list price.

Peter Pollen, of Peter Pollen Ford Ltd., said ICBC's complaint refers specifically to sheetmetal body parts supplied by dealer organizations.

While there is some justification for it, he said, the problem is more complex than concluding that a group of dealers is ripping off ICBC.

He said his firm charges 15 per cent above the manufacturer's list price in recognition of the cost of bringing fenders, body panels and other parts from the Vancouver depot.

Pollen said the bodyshop repair business is marginally profitable at best. If ICBC, which already stipulates labor rates on repairs, is going to arbitrarily fix parts prices "a lot of people are going to fold up."

Len Barkley, president of the Victoria automobile dealers' association, said overheads are higher for Victoria dealers and ICBC should recognize that.

"It's unrealistic to compare Victoria and Vancouver, which is what ICBC is doing," Barkley said. "We have to pay freight to get the parts here, but dealers on the mianland can just go to the depot and pick them up."

Frank Carson, owner of Suburban Motors Ltd., said he doubts that any Victoria firm charges as much for parts as the ICBC letter claims.

"I object to this blanket statement," he added. "The implication is that everyone is charging 45 per cent more.

Inflation little guy's fault

Dollar exchange

Petro B.C. profit $227M

The B.C. Petroleum Corp. made a profit of more than $227 million during the year ended March 31, 1979 — an increase of $12.1 million over the previous year.

Revenues totalled $433.7 million, up from the $413.6 million in 1978.

The Crown corporation's annual statement tabled in the legislature Tuesday shows the corporation retained $44.2 million and transferred $164.3 million to the provincial government.

The government had estimated it would collect $195 million from the corporation during the year and predicts it will get $170 million during the current fiscal year which began April 1.

Pot smugglers pouring it in

Drug enforcement officers believe that more than 900 tons of marijuana — worth more than $1.5 billion on the street — has been smuggled into B.C. and Washington State in the past 18 months.

That startling statistic was turned up by Times reporter Derek Sidenius in interviews with B.C. and Washington law enforcement and customs authorities as he investigated the extent of marijuana smuggling in the Pacific Northwest.

Sidenius spoke to officials in Seattle and this province and learned, among other things, that police and customs, although fighting hard against bulk trafficking in drugs, are finding it tough because the Pacific Northwest coast offers abundant areas where smugglers can unload their cargo with little fear of detection.

The official view is that despite recent major seizures in the Tofino area, only about one-tenth of all the smuggled marijuana is being intercepted.

Authorities compare the drug smuggling to the days of prohibition. But the stakes are higher and the people involved are prepared to spend big money to make big profits.

U.S. hijacking

CHICAGO (AP) — Two men claiming to have bombs hijacked an American Airlines jetliner carrying 137 persons to Chicago from New York today, the airline said. The men demanded that a jailed Serbian Orthodox priest be brought to the plane and flown with them to Peru.

Abacus realty put on block

Abacus Cities Ltd. will sell about $9 million worth of buildings in the Victoria area, a real estate spokesman said today.

Abacus is in receivership and the emergency sale was ordered to create a pool of funds to cover liabilities.

About $80 million worth of Canadian properties are being placed on the market.

The buildings with their asking prices include:

— Law Chambers in Bastion Square, $2.8 million.

— A professional building at Fort and Foul Bay, near Royal Jubilee Hospital, $2.8 million.

— The Belmont Building on Humboldt, $3.15 million.

— Land at Sidney for a proposed townhouse development, $1,105,000. The land involves 5.6 acres.

Not included in the sale, according to preliminary information, are two other developments owned by Abacus, the Market Square shopping centre and Gillain Manor, an alcoholism treatment centre.

First announcement of the sales came from Abacus, which is based in Alberta.

Abacus got into difficulties when an auditor warned its cash flow position was too low and a loan was subsequently called by a bank.

Higgin said further details of the sale offerings will be announced when they are known.

GARDENING
Hilda Beastall

Most gardeners who grow their vegetables, or most of them, either at home or on a rented allotment, like to taste the first picking in the raw. It may be carrots or green peas, or it may be green beans of the dwarf bush kinds now or quite soon.

Eating vegetables raw serves a useful purpose other than getting the well-known extra dietary values. Taste, texture and even the fresh odor remains in the memory as a guide to the amount of cooking required.

Italian and French preparation and cooking of fresh vegetables has been much written about. And more recently the Chinese way became almost a way of life in many Victoria homes.

The chief aim when cooking is to preserve the flavor and texture and to a great extent the color. This suggests a minimum of water and a minimum of cooking time. Or a light oil may be used with equally good effect. When cooking liquid, now rich in either water soluble or fat soluble nutrients, is used either to make a sauce for the vegetable or in another cooked dish next day, there is really very little nutrient loss between the garden patch and the serving on the plate.

First step in preparing green beans for perfect cooking is to pick them when young. Pick all of one size at one time. They will then cook in the same short period. A picking in two days time may be taken of a larger size so that none is allowed to become even near maturity so early in the season. Bean plants continue growing, flowering, and setting pods much longer when pods are never allowed to reach maturity. The bean should be barely seen when pods are cut for cooking — just a tiny embryo.

Soy beans and lima beans can be picked in the young stage for cooking briefly the same as the bush beans. Bush beans are sometimes called French beans, or simply dwarf beans, quite different from the climbing bean types and the Broad bean.

To Cook Young Green Beans:

Replace lid, adjust heat to bring back to boiling; without lifting lid, reduce heat to active boiling for seven minutes before testing for doneness. Take a few beans on fork to cool. They should still be bright green, slightly crisp with a taste that you remember from eating some raw. When done, drain beans at once, keeping liquid for later use.

If using a sauce, make it while beans cook, so they are served piping hot with the sauce on the side.

LEMON SAUCE
(use metric cup and spoons)

125 ml soft margarine
15 ml grated lemon peel
1 ml chopped parsley
1 ml sweet basil OR chopped chives if no basil

Warm margarine to soften. Stir in remaining ingredients. Makes 125 ml sauce; keep leftover in covered jar for next day.

YOGURT SAUCE

125 ml homemade yogurt
2 ml lemon juice
1 ml ground sunflower seeds
salt and pepper sparingly

Other Types of Beans in Late June: Broad Beans or Fava Beans, are a favorite with some people and disliked by others. Pick the thick pods when they first turn downward. Each is beautifully lined with soft down but only the beans are eaten. The smallest are eaten raw in salads. And I have come across one note about the two-inch-long size being cooked whole, but have not yet tried these.

Medium size are cooked similarly to green beans (above), or may be done in a covered pan with bacon pieces, using the bacon fat.

If desired, pour off the fat and cook the beans in soft margarine until just fork tender. Covered with a lid, they take only four or five minutes according to size (age). Serve on warm homemade wholewheat bun with a slice of cheddar cheese, or on hot toast.

Growing Soy Beans is exciting — you can use the young pods half-grown as a green vegetable with a new taste. Don't add anything except a few grains of salt at first tasting, or a little butter or margarine. Plain homemade yogurt is about the only sauce that won't mask the unusual flavor.

As the Soys develop in the pods, use some while they still have their delicate green color. Delicious with mild cheese and handboiled egg pushed through a flat grater as a salad, either hot or cold.

Leave some pods on the Soy plants to ripen for winter. Take up the plants before frost, leaving pods on for maturing in a warm room for a few days in fall. Then shell them quite dry and rattling, storing the dry Soys for a real taste treat in early winter.

A bean that is new to us this year is called Pea-Bean. Apparently it grows to a height between four and seven feet, so we have erected chicken wire for support. The plants seem to be strong, quick growers so it won't be long before we taste the first pods of the Pea-Beans.

Don't ignore a new vegetable just because you have never tasted it. Try it in small quantity, you will probably like it and invent interesting ways to serve it. Or you may already have ways that are different.

IF YOU'RE not fortunate enough to have a vegetable garden producing at this time of year, you have to do what this woman is doing — compare prices at the supermarket. Only Jessie Bowles has an extra interest in shopping; she teaches consumer studies at an Ontario community college, so keeping up with the price trends is part of her job. She advises that the best buys aren't always in the largest sizes.

No downbeat message, it's just burlesque

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Ann Miller and Mickey Rooney are reviving traditional burlesque a half-century after the old stage revues degenerated into strip teases and bedroom farce.

The splashy $1.3 million show evokes fond memories for Ann who was featured in the 1939-40 version of George White's Scandals back in the days when Broadway was called The Great White Way.

Scott's World

The leggy, black-haired Miller hoofs through some of the same routines she did on stage 40 years ago without missing a tap.

"I was only 15 years old at the time," said Ann. "I've included some of the the numbers, step for step, that I danced in my first movie, New Faces of 1937 when I was only 13. I didn't forget a thing."

Sugar Babies — the title comes from the ancient name for Broadway chorus girls — enjoyed a standing room only debut in San Francisco and begins a limited stand in Hollywood this month.

The show will play Detroit, Chicago and Philadelphia enroute to the New York opening in September.

"Mickey and I attended Lawlor's Professional School for Children in Hollywood when we weren't working," Ann recalled. "Judy Garland, Donald O'Connor and Freddy Bartholomew were classmates.

Ann, who looks much as she did when she played Skelton's foil, says her weight is down to 122 pounds and that she is dancing better than ever.

"I worked hard to stay in shape," she said. "The 18- and 19-year-old chorus girls in Sugar Babies are dancing their feet off to keep up with me.

"What we're doing is traditional burlesque before it became dirty. It used to be as respectable as any form of entertainment. A couple of generations have grown up in this country not knowing what high class burlesque is.

Sugar Babies was born when producer Harry Rigby saw Ann in Mame on Broadway two years ago. He convinced her to star in a revival of Anything Goes with Van Johnson. Johnson was unavailable and Rigby switched his original idea to a musical revue and brought in Mickey.

"We're bringing back an era of entertainment, of laughter and music. I think audiences will be happy to see a show without social problems or downbeat messages.

"I think we'll prove the public still likes good dancing, good music, funny routines and pretty girls. If not, we're in big trouble."

Canada again wins kudos for its theatrical design

OTTAWA (CP) — For the second time in succession, Canada has won special mention honor at the leading international theatrical design and architecture congress, the Prague Quadrenniale in Czechoslovakia.

The set and costume works of five designers, and architectural achievements by seven firms were entered in the Canadian exhibit at the 1979 Quadrenniale, which runs to July 2. Also displayed, to mark this as International Year of the Child, were the works of Canadian puppet and marionette theatres, principally the work of Felix Mirbt of Montreal.

Canada won special mention at the 1975 Quadrenniale for set designs by Murray Laufer of Toronto, costume designs by Francois Barbeau of Montreal, and the architecture of the new Shaw Festival theatre in Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ont., by Roland J. Thom and Peter Smith of Toronto.

This year, the Canadian entry in the international exposition and competition were chosen by the Associated Designers of Canada, and the display was financed by the external affairs department's newly-reorganized bureau of international cultural relations.

The bureau reports that after the show opened June 6, the Canadian exhibit was given a special award for the quality it added to the show. The Quadrenniale is held every four years by the Czech ministry of culture as a world forum of scenic and costume design and theatre architecture.

Also included were designs for four National Arts Centre French theatre productions, Robert Prevost's sets and costumes for Le Cid, and Michael Eagan's work for De La Manipulation de Dieu, Le Songe (Te Dream Play), and Woyzeck. The last two toured Canada.

Prevost's design for Theatre de Nouveau Monde's production of Les Fourberies de Scapin, Astrid Janson's designs for Les Canadiens, and Esmirelda and the Hunchback of Notre Dame, for Toronto Workshop Productions, and three designs by Cameron Porteous for Vancouver Playhouse, The Crucible, Oedipus and Tales of the Vienna Woods, also were displayed.

The theatre architecture part of the Canadian exhibit included the Adelaide Court Theatre reconstruction, the Leah Posluns Theatre and Young People's Theatre in Toronto, the new Citadel and Stage Three theatres in Edmonton, Vancouver's City Stage and David Y.H. Lui theatres, the Grand Theatre reconstruction in London, Ont., the Huron County Playhouse near Grand Bend, Ont., and Le Theatre du Bois de Coulonge, Quebec City.

The external affairs department said part of the exhibit will be shown after the Quadrenniale at the Canadian Cultural Centre in Paris, at Canada House in London, and possibly in Brussels.
